

Forest Pavilion Turned Over to P-I Foundation

Portland - Oregon's two leading industries, forest products and agriculture, joined hands recently when the seven-wing Forest Products Centennial Pavilion was turned over to the Pacific International Junior Dormitory Foundation in ceremonies at the P-I grounds here.

The 24,000 square foot open structure is comprised of seven hyperbolic-paraboloids, each 30 feet square, separated from each other by 5 foot wide plastic skylights.

Most unusual feature of the Pavilion is that it is constructed of wooden 1 by 4's secured to each other with staples. Lamination of the shells was done in position high above the ground through use of forms of shoring.

Use Undecided

The P-I Junior Dormitory Foundation has not decided the exact use which will be made of the futuristic Pavilion. They have indicated, however, some plans to enclose the space and make it into a general meeting area, following some tentative plans which Pavilion architect John Stiers has which will maintain the architectural beauty of the structure as a show place for the striking use of forest products.

Basic responsibility of the P-I Junior Dormitory Foundation is to provide facilities and look after the interests of both 4-H and Future Farmers of America organizations throughout Oregon, Washington, and Idaho, all participants in the annual P-I show each October in Portland.

Last year the Forest Products Centennial committee raised and spent a quarter of a million dollars in the construction and promotion of the Pavilion and of Oregon's forest products in general.

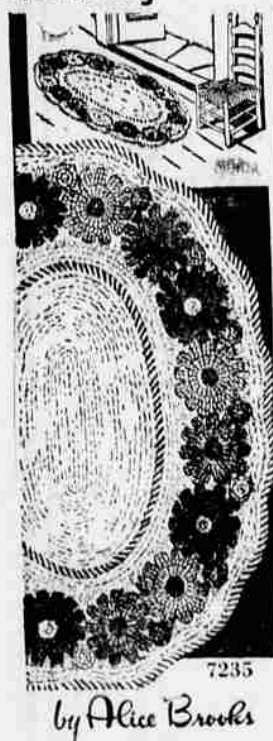

Jefferson Council Election Voided

Jefferson, Ore. - Three Jefferson city council members thought they won election in Friday's election and so did the voters, but the city attorney said differently Wednesday.

Attorney Dale Crabtree cited a city ordinance requiring the officials to get two-thirds of the total vote and none of the three - C. D. Person, Arlie Cooper and Roy Wickesham - did.

There will be another election in November.

Schweitzer Sees Need for New African Leaders

Paris - 1978 - Dr. Albert Schweitzer, sorrowing over the racial strife in South Africa, believes that solution of the problem there requires the emergence of "great" new leaders - both white and black.

The 85-year-old Nobel Peace Prize winner, philosopher, musician and medical missionary stated his views in a letter received from him today by United Press International in Paris.

The letter, dated May 10, was handwritten in blue ink and mailed from his jungle hospital at Lambaréne in former French Equatorial Africa. It was in reply to a cable invitation from UPI last month inviting Schweitzer to give his views on the South African segregation policy trouble.

Schweitzer declined to give any detailed expression of views on the South African problem, saying:

"I think that judgments pronounced abroad do not help things advance, but complicate them."

But he did say: "What would be necessary in South Africa is that a great white personality and a great black personality should emerge as a team, together, would create a new spirit in which a solution might be found and agreed to. Otherwise peace cannot be established."

Schweitzer asked that he be excused for not having more to say publicly and for not replying to the cable questionnaire more promptly. He explained the delay, in his one-page, personally signed letter, in these words:

"I am writing to you very late because these last weeks have imposed on me in my hospital a load of work that has not permitted me to keep up with my correspondence as I would have wanted to."

And in a thoughtful gesture, he added:

"I am returning the prepaid (cable) reply receipt so that you can recoup the sum you paid to the post office."

The receipt was enclosed.

BIG SPACE BUDGET
