

Liberal Demos Near Half Way Mark in Program

Washington — (AP) — Liberal Democrats say they hope to reach the half-way mark this week in their drive for passage of a "minimum" six-point legislative program.

Success or failure of their efforts to send the White House a bill to provide federal funds to help build public schools will be decided in a struggle on the house floor starting Wednesday.

This bill, opposed by the administration, is one of half a dozen on which the liberal Democrats from northern cities attach top priority in developing issues for the election-year campaign.

Two others already have passed — a bill to bolster Negro voting rights in the south, and another to launch a $251 million program of federal aid for communities with chronic unemployment.

Subject Neutralized
The civil rights bill, signed into law by the president, has tended to neutralize this subject as a campaign issue.

The president vetoed the Democratic plan to help economically-distressed areas. Democrats are counting on this as campaign fodder. The administration has proposed a compromise in this area but it is doubtful Congress will act.

The remainder of the Democratic "must" program calls for an increase in the $1.00 an hour minimum wage and some broadening of coverage; launching a new program of medical care for the aged, and a catch-all housing bill, including a step-up in federal outlays for slum clearance and federal lending to build college dormitories.

The school bill would provide $975 million in federal grants to build schools, with the funds spread over three years.

It will have to run a gauntlet of amendments to add or earmark funds for school teachers' salaries and for parochial schools and to bar racial segregation in any of the schools constructed with the federal funds.

Would Aid Conservatives
Some backers already fear that adoption of any one of these would help a coalition of conservative Republicans and southern Democrats kill the measure on final passage.

The senate already has approved a two-year school aid program calling for almost $2 billion in federal funds and including money for teachers' salaries. However, the senate is expected to accept any smaller version the house passes. The conservative-dominated rules committee, by blocking senate-house negotiations to work out a compromise, can put any house-passed bill before the senate on a take-it-or-leave-it basis.

The question bothering the Democratic liberals is whether they can push any bill through the house. They have taken private nosecounts indicating the measure in its present form would pass by a margin of 40 votes. But they aren't claiming victory.

Coin Flip Decides KF Timber Purchase

Portland — (AP) — The flip of a coin decided the buyer of a $31,260 lot of blown-down timber on the Klamath Indian reservation, the Bureau of Indian Affairs disclosed here Wednesday.

Two identical bids were entered, although the sale involved 1,100,000 board feet of Ponderosa and Sugar pine, and 30,000 feet of Lodgepole pine, downed in the big blow of last November and scattered over 80,420 acres. James F. Coburn, a member of the Klamath tribe and a logger in the area, and John C. Warnke did the seemingly impossible — entered identical bids. They agreed to flip a coin to decide the buyer and Coburn won.

Five Arrested for Night-Time Hunting

Salem — (AP) — The Marion county sheriff's office made five arrests Tuesday in connection with a night-time deer hunt near Silver Falls state park.

Held on $150 bond each were three men charged with illegal possession of venison and a 19-year-old youth charged with hunting deer with the aid of a light.

The fifth person was a 16-year-old boy.
