First Space Men Not Expected To Make Decisions

New York–(Science Service)–The first men in space will not often be called upon to make decisions in the ordinary sense of the word. For the most part the decisions will be limited to a simple matter of interpreting what the instruments indicate and taking the appropriate prescribed action.

The decision is no more difficult than that of the motorist waiting at a red light who must decide to go when the light turns green.

Yet even when such "decisions" could just as well be made by a machine, the "thinking" will be done by humans in the interests of equipment simplicity, weight and reliability, Dr. Alec Williams of Hughes Aircraft Company, Culver City, Calif., told a Conference on Human Decisions in Complex Systems, held under the auspices of the New York Academy of Sciences here.

Situations May Arise

In case of emergency or near emergency, improbable situations may arise where no definite course of action has been prescribed in advance. In this case, the operator will really have to make a decision.

Decision-making is similarly unnecessary for most personnel in a missile operation system Dr. John E. Mangiesdorf, a psychologist of Lockheed Aircraft Corporation, Sunnyvale, Calif., told the meeting. Even when the missile system is in a stage of development, 90 per cent of the personnel function as a kind of animated electronic part.

'Creative Minority'

Examples of this kind of work include that of the stenographer who produces a finished letter from dictation or the machinist who produces finished parts from machine drawings or the electrician who produces actual circuits from wiring diagrams.

The remaining 10 per cent of the personnel is a "creative minority," who are responsible for all significant decisions. Some way should be found, Dr. Mangelsdorf urged, to emancipate the creative minority from paper handling and leave these few decision makers free to perform creative activity and to make the few necessary decisions and plan what the 90 per cent will do.

MANY TRAVEL ABROAD

New York – (AP) – An estimated 1,475,000 Americans traveled abroad last year – an increase of more than 98 per cent over 1950, latest travel figures show. Some 1,600,000 are expected to go abroad this year, a gain of almost 10 per cent over 1959.

GOOD ADVERTISING REALLY SELLS!

When you tell them, they know. But when you sell them, they buy! And buying makes the difference in your business profits.

Apply this same thinking to your advertising. A listing in a business directory tells the public that you're in business. A timely, pointed ad in the Mail Tribune Classified Section tells 'em . . . and sells 'em! A Want Ad shows the customers that you have what they want right now . . . and gives them good reasons for buying it right now.

When you have something to sell . . . use the advertising medium that knows the difference between telling and selling. Use the Want Ads . . . they make the profitable difference!
