

Hatfield Sets Special Holiday Traffic Safety Drive

CHILE VOLCANO ERUPTS—In a spectacular display of nature's forces, this volcano near Puyehue, Chile, belches smoke and lava. Eruptions from several volcanoes in the southern section of Chile followed the many earthquakes that rocked the area. The death toll has been estimated at more than 5,000. (UPI Radioteletype)

Offensive Most Concentrated in Oregon History

Salem—Gov. Mark Hatfield has something very special in order for drivers in Oregon this Memorial day week end.

Curbing state traffic deaths is a major aim of his administration and secret plans for an ultra-intensive traffic offensive ordered by him go into effect today.

Oregon recorded its bloodiest traffic year in 1959, with 492 victims—high considering the lower number of cars compared with many other states.

The new offensive is described by those who know the plans as the most concentrated traffic enforcement activity for a holiday period in Oregon history.

Called Lethal Weapon

"The automobile has become a lethal weapon in irrefragable hands," Hatfield declared today. "It kills with all the finality of a gun, bomb or any other death-dealing device."

"Laws cannot prevent carelessness but their strict enforcement can be a stern reminder."

He became governor in 1959 and launched his attack on careless holiday drivers during the 54 hours of the 1959 Memorial day week end.

Violations Reported

Planes observed motorists and reported violations to ground officers. Radar and unmarked patrol cars also were used. Hatfield personally flew in a helicopter over major freeways. But there still were 324 accidents, 133 injuries and five deaths.

Nothing spectacular was attempted last July 4 but last Christmas and New Year's, roadblocks were thrown up to check all drivers on routine items—the idea being to slow everyone down.

Yet Christmas accounted for 460 accidents, 88 injured and four dead.

Stocks Advance in Generally Routine Preholiday Trading

New York—Stocks advanced in generally routine preholiday trading today.

Some of the recently strong electronics came under pressure during the first hour. Texas Instruments lost around 4 and Motorola nearly 3. International Business Machines countered with a gain of around 5 points to a new high.

Motors were easier with Ford, General Motors and American Motors off by small fractions.

In the drugs, American Home Products added nearly 2, Merck and Upjohn 1 or more.

Industrials made their strongest upside bid in their average since Monday chiefly on gains of 1 or more in Du Pont and Union Carbide and about 1 in American Telephone.

Plywood Mills Close Because of Slumping Market

Portland—At least 58 plywood mills have shut down temporarily or plan to do so soon because of a slumping market, Crow's Lumber Digest reported today.

The shutdowns are expected to affect more than 5,000 workers in Oregon, Washington and California. Most of them are in Oregon.

Some mills have announced a week's shutdown while others said they would close until the market situation improved.

Roy Foy, manager of Plywood Products Company in Corvallis, where 450 workers will be laid off next week, said it was hoped the cutbacks in production would help the market.

Weather Blamed

Bad weather in the East and Midwest has been blamed at least in part for the current slump. Prices at most mills have been at a low of $64 for quarter-inch AD grade and at least one mill dropped to $60.

Georgia-Pacific, one of the region's biggest producers, has predicted an upturn in prices soon.

Crow's reported that Georgia-Pacific planned to shut down six mills, four in Oregon and two in Washington, temporarily.

Most producers hoped a one week closure would help the market situation.

M. L. Hopkins, general manager of Willamette Plywood Corp. in Salem said "We can't operate until we get some business."

DOW-JONES AVERAGES

School Measure Faces Trouble

Washington—An anti-segregation provision in the House - passed $1,300,000,000 school construction bill today endangered chances of any school aid legislation getting through Congress this year.

The Democratic-sponsored bill, first general school construction measure ever approved by the House, was passed 206-189 Thursday night after a day of dizzy parliamentary maneuvering.

It now goes to the Senate, which passed a $1,833,000,000 bill in February without any ban against spending the money on segregated schools. The Senate version provides aid for teachers' salaries as well as classroom construction.

The anti-segregation amendment in the House bill put the Senate on the spot and raised the likelihood of a deadlock between the two branches of Congress.

The Senate faced the choice of risking a southern filibuster against the House bill or risking a roadblock in the House rules committee if it seeks a compromise between the two differing measures.

Unemployment compensation benefits paid during 1959 amounted to slightly more than $2.25 billion, according to Commerce Clearing House. The total compared with payments of $3.5 billion in 1958.

Herter Testimony

'K' Made Miscalculation In Torpedoing Conference

President Eisenhower said Thursday that Khrushchev may have scuttled the summit under "pressure by the Stalinists and the Chinese Reds."

In a 5,000-word opening statement Herter also said: "The Soviet defense minister, Marshal Rodion Malinovsky, who accompanied Khrushchev 'literally everywhere' in Paris, may have been sent along so he 'would be able to testify' upon returning to Moscow that Khrushchev had 'stuck strictly to the agreed position.'"

Khrushchev made a "basic miscalculation" at Paris in thinking he could split the United States and its allies over the spy plane incident.

U.S. Must Stay Calm

"There are no signs of any 'radical alteration in Soviet policy' but 'we can expect a continuation of a propaganda effort to split' the allies from the United States."

"The United States must keep a calm and steady gaze on the world scene" and avoid any action increasing tension.

"The United States will continue to seek 'business-like' negotiations with Russia, with top priority being given to finding a way to halt the world arms race - 'and thus to meet the nuclear menace that hangs over mankind.'"

Although the world's hopes have been "keenly disappointed" by the summit failure, "the signs so far are that the basic realities of the world situation have not been greatly changed." But the Soviet hierarchy, operating in the utmost secrecy, could always change course suddenly.

Hearing Room Searched

A half hour before Herter went into the closed-door hearing, the committee room was given a thorough search by State Department security agents to be sure no concealed microphones or listening devices were planted in the room.

Chairman J. William Fulbright (D-Ark.) launched the committee's closed hearing with a statement in which he assured Herter the inquiry would not be conducted on a "partisan basis."

Herter testified before the House Foreign Affairs Committee Thursday that Russia may be preparing "some new threatening act."

The House group quoted Herter as saying at a closed session that Russia's moderate behavior since the summit blowup could be interpreted either "as a desire to avoid bringing on a war crisis or as psychological in order to pull the wool over our eyes."

Expects New Red Move

He said Herter anticipated "further spectacular action by the Russians in the months to come."

President Eisenhower gave his complete approval to the Senate inquiry at a meeting Thursday with congressional leaders of both parties. He pledged the administration's complete cooperation.

The Senate hearings, modeled after the 1951 inquiry into President Truman's firing of Gen. Douglas MacArthur as Far East commander, were the Democratic leadership's answer to demands for an all-out congressional investigation.

Midas Spying Failure Hinted

Washington—There were strong hints today that America's Midas spy-in-the-sky satellite probably will fail to signal back to earth any test rocket firings it spots.

LT. Gen. Bernard A. Schriever, chief of the Air Research and Development Command, said the data link telemetry system which transmits infrared scanner information to ground stations has not been functioning properly.

Radio commands are being sent to the satellite in an attempt to re-establish the data link, he said Thursday.

However, Schriever said, unless the link is repaired, the detection system cannot be tested in connection with scheduled missile launchings and ground firings.

The tests were set up to check the satellite's ability to detect hidden nuclear bomb tests or missile firings.

The Midas satellite, launched Tuesday, is a forerunner of a system of orbiting satellites which could warn of sneak missile attacks.

Pasternak May Have Transfusion

Moscow—Soviet writer Boris Pasternak, in serious condition after two heart attacks and pneumonia, may undergo a blood transfusion today.

The 70-year-old Nobel Prize winner's family said Pasternak also was having difficulty eating because of stomach bleeding.

Reports circulating here said Pasternak has lung cancer, but his brother Alexander said "there has never been a question of lung cancer as far as the family knows." He added, however, that Pasternak did have lung trouble as a result of the pneumonia attack.

One of the three Kremlin heart specialists attending the writer said a blood transfusion may be necessary today but would be a "delicate business."

Pasternak is confined to his country dacha at Peredelkino, a Moscow suburb, where he has lived in seclusion since his rejection of the 1958 Nobel Prize for literature. He turned down the prize after Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev and leading Soviet writers criticized Pasternak's works and the Nobel awards.
