The Medford man succeeds Edwin R. "Ted" Pooley, prominent Hood River, Ore., fruit grower, who has served successively as president for 28 years. First president of the bureau was David Holmes, Medford, now deceased.

Naumes is one of the owners of Nye and Naumes Packing company and Crystal Springs Packing company, both of Medford. He has been a prominent winter pear shipper since 1946 and has served on the bureau's executive committee.

Hearing on County Budget Set June 21

A public hearing on Jackson county's approximately $4 1/2 million budget will be held at 8 p.m. June 21 in the Jackson county courthouse.

There will be no levy for Jackson county for the next fiscal year, the county court announced. Estimated budget expenditures for 1960-61 total $4,427,586.72.

Added to this figure is a cash working allocation fund of $201,529.07. The working fund of 10 per cent of the budget total was recommended by George E. Stacey, auditor, member of a local accounting firm. This cash reserve which started this current fiscal year will continue to build up until it reaches the 10 per cent figure. The county may borrow money from this but it must be paid back. It would cover the period from July 1 to Dec. 31 when no timber receipts or allocations from state tax monies are coming in.

Available cash estimated to be in the county treasury to start with on July 1, 1960 is $1,291,852.52, according to the accountant's figures. County Treasurer Karl Janouch said he expects $70,000 of the current fiscal year budget will be unspent by the end of the fiscal year June 30. This is included in the estimate of the available cash. Already in the cash working fund is $90,000 to be added to the allocation for the new year.

County Judge Earl Miller previously had stated that a balance of $86,557.98 in the county relief fund would not be needed by the county this year.

The relief money, received by the county as its share of the alcohol tax and license fees and amusement device tax is expected to increase by an estimated $3,000 during the 1960-61 fiscal year. The fund has not been touched since July, 1958, when the county budget committee transferred $30,000 to the general fund at budget time for expenditure through the general county fund for relief. Total as of Friday was $86,557.98.

Miller explained that the fund is set up by Oregon statute to be "expended only by the county court or board of county commissioners for mother's aid, old age pensions and direct relief of the indigent."

Miller said "ample" funds were available this year from other county receipts to take care of anticipated welfare costs of an estimated $226,531 and the $50,000 budget for miscellaneous relief, mainly for hospitals. (The hospitals had requested $85,000 for the new fiscal year to offset indigent patient losses.)

Confusion Caused By Non-Partisan Ballots -- Madden

Apparently some members of election boards in Jackson county became confused and did not issue non-partisan ballots to every voter during the May 20 primary election, County Clerk Marvin Madden reported Friday.

Since a number of people were denied the right to vote on all candidates because of this mixup, Madden said he has referred the question of what to do next to the district attorney's office. "Apparently, some election board members were confused over the term 'independent voters' - those registered as neither Democratic or Republican - and the term 'non-partisan' as applying to the justice of peace positions," the county clerk said. "Ballots containing the names of non-partisan candidates for Gold Hill and Ashland justices of peace at some polling places were handed only to independent voters."

Madden said either party could challenge the election, or the district attorney's office may decide merely to place the justice of peace candidates on the ballot during the November general election.

"Because several boards did not issue non-partisan ballots to every voter appearing at the polls in their precinct, this may affect the validity of the election for justices of the peace in both the Ashland and Gold Hill districts," Madden said in his written statement.

"I have written the district attorney to ascertain whether the election for justices of the peace was legal or not and whether losing candidates will have recourse to have this matter placed before the voters again," he concluded.

Girls, Floats, Ancient Cars, Bands Highlight Elks Parade

High-stepping, bare-legged beauties led a mile long parade through the streets of downtown Medford Saturday afternoon as a high spot of the Oregon State Elks association convention here.

Girls, girls and more girls were well interspersed in the long column of marching bands, drill teams, ancient model cars, long, sleek Cadillac, Dikeland bands and novelty floats. It even had a red-nosed clown to toss candy to the youngsters who either held their parents' hands along the crowd-lined streets or perched on dad's shoulders or car tops.

The weatherman had cautioned possible rain, but the prediction proved wrong. It was a sultry 77 degrees, which brought a rosy glow to the faces of the pretty marching girls. The Salvation Army was on the spot, bringing up the rear with its stretcher truck equipped with dischargers for possible heat-wilted marchers.

Forming the leading color guard were two husky Marines flanked by two Air Force men. Following the color guard was the Medford Elks lodge's exalted ruler Joe Hosick, riding in a replica of a 1902 Rambler.

The Medford High school band, dressed in maroon and white uniforms, followed, playing "I Love a Parade."

Every Elks lodge in the state seemed to be represented. Those who had been painting the town the night before took time out to paint large signs on white butcher paper and hastily drape them over the sides of new model cars. The Old Timers Car club transported Elk notables in their ancient vehicles.

The wail of bagpipes from Ashland's Elk lodge Kilty band shrilled above the "Oompah-pah-pah" of the big horns and thump of the drums. A small sports car transporting yet another unit of the lengthy parade whirred up alongside a tall, burly "Scotsman" of the Kilty band.

The parade was the climax of the four-day convention here this week.

Registration had started Wednesday, and pre-convention meetings, golf, bowling, mixers and dancing got underway Thursday.

Bowling and golf continued with a smorgasbord lunch, trapshoot warmup and side trip to historic gold-mining town of Jacksonville, style show and champagne tea and dinner.

Saturday the bowling continued in the morning with a state Elks team trapshoot at the Medford Gun club, business session, smorgasbord lunch and grand ball at the Medford armory.

Nearly all Jackson county high schools were represented by bands. The Jackson county "Miss Pageant" convertibles rolled along with summer-frosted beauties perched on the backs of the seats.

Standing at the curb grinning at all the paper garbage drifting down on Medford streets was A. A. "we'll haul it to Jacksonville dump" Bortano, of the City Sanitary service.

The parade was the climax of the four-day convention here this week.

Seoul newspapers issued extras on the departure. A U.S. embassy official said visas were issued to Rhee and his wife Saturday at the request of the South Korean foreign ministry. He said Rhee carried a diplomatic passport.

Informed sources said Rhee wanted to remain in South Korea but that his strong-willed Austrian wife insisted on leaving and going into exile in the United States.

Visit Ambassador The sources said Rhee and his wife visited American Ambassador Walter P. McCone about 10 days ago and discussed their plans, presumably of seeking exile in the U.S.

It was learned that Rhee had gone to the 8th Army military hospital on Friday for a medical checkup.

There have been rumors that the Rhees were planning to go into exile in the U.S., but only one newspaper in Seoul had a story yesterday saying that the Rhees had made preparations and would leave in the near future.

Ousted President Goes Secretly on Chartered Plane

Korean Papers Issue Extras on Departure

Seoul, Korea - (UPI) - Syngman Rhee, who was forced to resign as president April 23 and thus ended his 12-year rule of the Republic of Korea, left secretly with his wife today to seek exile in the United States.

Only a few persons were at Kimpo airport when the 85-year-old former president and his wife took off at 8:45 a.m. by a civilian air transport chartered commercial plane.

Airport officials said the plane would stop at Wake Island, and presumably fly from there to Honolulu.

(U.S. officials in Washington said the government gave the Rhees regular tourist visas at the request of his successor, Acting President Hui Chung. They said a Korean residents society in Hawaii provided a chartered airliner for the flight.)

LOVE A PARADE - All Jackson county seemed to follow the theme music of the Medford high school band, "I Love a Parade," Saturday as an Oregon State Elks association parade wound through Medford's business section. A panorama shot down West Main st. shows a high school band, ancient cars hauling Elks notables and youngsters straying out from the curb. The parade down the bunting-draped streets was estimated as a mile long. It included several marching bands, novelty floats, cars, a clown, and the Salvation Army's disaster truck bringing up the rear to catch any marcher who was wilted by the sultry 77-degree weather Saturday.
