

Farm Subsidies Defended Here by OSC Market Man

Farm subsidies were defended here yesterday by Oscar Hagg, Oregon State college dairy marketing specialist.

"We can't put the destiny of American agriculture to the wolves," he declared in a talk to Medford Kiwanians at their luncheon meeting at Rogue Valley Country club.

He said the farm program is not perfect but that there is a farm problem, and that it cannot be ignored.

"When we talk about subsidies, let's talk about all the subsidies," Hagg remarked. "Let's look at this thing in its true perspective." He pointed to United States mail, maritime, air line and business reconversion subsidies and to those that went to the railroads in the 1800s. He pointed to the billions of dollars in contracts large corporations get.

Nation of Subsidies

"We are a nation of subsidies but it is only a subsidy when someone else gets it," Hagg said in pointing to an attitude on the matter. He mentioned benefits to the people from the U. S. department of agriculture budget and commented that "it is not as bad as it really looks."

On the matter of farm surpluses, Hagg declared, "I think it is a good thing." He gave surpluses as the reason the American consumer is today getting his "food basket" at a smaller percentage of his income than at any other time in the history of the country. Hagg said that, if there are shortages, "we have high prices."

June is Dairy month and Hagg spoke of the dairy enterprise as big business. Of the cow, he said, "she employs a lot of people."

Medford Teacher To Attend Institute

Corvallis - Fifty-one high school and college mathematics teachers from 11 states have been selected to attend a special eight-week training institute at Oregon State college June 20 to Aug. 12.

Adelbert F. Hinkert, of Medford High school, has been selected as one of twenty-nine teachers from Oregon.

The institute is sponsored by the National Science foundation, from which Oregon State has received a grant of $61,500 to conduct the training.

Dr. Albert R. Poole, professor of mathematics, will be institute director.

Each of the teachers selected to attend will receive grants of $75 per week, plus tuition and fees and some travel and dependent allowances.

The institutes are part of a nationwide program sponsored by NSF to improve science and mathematics teaching, to increase the supply of top-flight scientists and teachers, and to stimulate greater interest among young people in science careers.
