

AMONG GRADUATES — Three Medford area men were among 63 seniors receiving doctor of dental medicine degrees Thursday in Benson Polytechnic High school auditorium in Portland. The three are, left to right, Richard G. Vinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Vinson, Medford; Robert F. Fry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Fry, Central Point; and Jay R. Dean, son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Dean, Medford. Dr. O. Meredith Wilson, president of the University of Oregon, addressed graduates and conferred degrees. At the annual dental school senior honors convocation, Dean was named recipient of the American Academy of Oral Roentgenology award.

Youth Arrested, Won't Tell Name

Salem—(UPI)—Marion county juvenile authorities have a juvenile offender in custody who won't tell his name or identify his parents.

The youth was picked up here Wednesday while hitchhiking. Officers said he not only resisted arrest, but damaged a police car.

He permitted authorities to fingerprint him but they said a routine check told them nothing. The youth is being held in juvenile quarters here.

Police Chief Asks Caution in City's Residential Areas

With the summer months again at hand, Medford Chief of Police Charles P. Champlin has issued an appeal to all area motorists to keep an eye out for children playing in the streets—especially in residential areas.

The appeal is directed not only to motorists, but also to parents to encourage them to keep their children out of the streets.

Champlin pointed out that children playing in and near streets often get involved in their play that they forget all about the possible danger from cars.

Fortunately, the chief noted, there have been no recent deaths in Medford involving children playing in the streets, but there have been several injuries.

Can Avoid Accidents

"If motorists will be especially cautious and mothers will do their utmost to keep their children and neighbor children from playing in the streets, we can avoid these senseless and tragic accidents," he said.

Although the speed limit on all residential streets is 25 miles per hour, unless otherwise posted, it might be well for motorists to go even slower, he said, for it takes only a second for a child to come running out from behind a parked car after a ball. He added that children running after toys in the street is the major cause of auto-pedestrian accidents in residential areas.

Impress on Children

Parents should impress upon their children the importance of good traffic safety and pedestrian habits, he said. Some of the things they should point out to their children are the dangers of running out from between parked cars; to be sure and look both ways before entering a street for any reason; to never play in the streets; and to always cross streets at designated crosswalks or intersections.

In most cases, in Medford, there are park or school playgrounds near enough to residential areas so that parents can send their children to these rather than allow them to play in the streets, he pointed out.

Champlin said it is better for parents to be strict with their children in regards to playing in the street than to run the risk of having an otherwise happy summer end in tragedy.

Crowing Contest Plans Prepared

Rogue River committees here are now preparing for the National Rooster Crowing contest sponsored by the Rogue River Boosters. The contest is slated June 18.

Featured will be a parade and the annual crow. Contest officials have not definitely decided whether or not there would be a Rooster Crow dance night which is generally held to provide funds for the next crow since the VFW turned the Boosters down on the use of their hall.

Scheduled at 10:30 a.m. is the parade under the direction of Joni Jones and LaDene Chiamulera. Participants have been asked to begin registering contestants as early as 9:30 a.m. on the local grade school grounds.

With a $250 purse, the actual crowing will begin at noon. Another $250 will be offered to other winners. The animal crowing the most times during the 30-minute session is declared the winner.

Betty F. — My husband blames me for the scandal involving our son.

Edward F. — I might have saved him.

Betty F. — Several months ago I accidentally learned that my 21-year-old son, Frank, was indulging in abnormal sex practices.

I was horrified and tried to do everything possible to get him to change his ways. I didn't want his father or anyone else to find out. I kept it a secret between the two of us and told him it would remain so as long as he kept to his word of giving up these practices.

Well, the worst happened. A few weeks ago Frank was arrested on a charge of involving a minor. Because of certain extenuating circumstances he managed to escape a prison sentence. However, the whole scandal has broken my heart and made a wreck of me. Now my husband blames me for everything. The least he can do is sympathize with me the way any decent man would.

Edward F. — Sympathize with her—that's all I've got to do now! Betty acts as though all the troubles are hers. It's no trouble of mine if our son is found guilty of a disgraceful crime!

Yes, I do blame Betty because she has always over-protected the boy. She never told me about any of the bad things he did because she was afraid I'd hit him. That's what she said, anyway. But she should have known I'm not the type to kill my own kid. What if I gave him a few whacks? It might have saved him from all the misery he's involved in now.

I certainly think Betty should have told me the mis-ute she found out about this trouble. I would have been able to do something before the whole thing became an open scandal. Now Frank's life is ruined and she's to blame.

The Council: There is considerable justification for Edward's accusations. Psychological studies show that a basic factor in the development of male sexual deviation is the lack of a close relationship between father and son. The mother treats both husband and son as her children, overwhelming them emotionally and psychologically. She plays one against the other, never permitting them to form a close tie based on respect for one another as males.

Betty's behavior on learning of her son's serious problem was not an isolated incident. It followed a well-established pattern and she must have foreseen the consequences, for Frank's behavior probably also followed a pattern. It is unlikely that this was the first instance in which he broke his word to his mother.

Betty's handling of the whole issue indicates that she treated it like a bit of naughtiness on the part of a school-boy. She didn't take it seriously until it flared into the public eye. Her action in asking a grown man for his word not to repeat a sexual misdemeanor reveals a childlike misunderstanding of the nature of such problems.

Of course Edward should have been given the important information about his son, but we think he should realize that this information would have been available long before he had kept his eyes and ears open and had insisted upon his right to establish a good relationship with his son. The signs of deviation do not emerge suddenly and it isn't necessary to spy or pry in order to find them. But it sometimes requires some courage on the parents' part to admit they have seen them.

At this time, it is important for Betty and Edward to stop bickering and start thinking about the future. Their son can be helped through psychotherapy if he is willing to accept this help. He should be encouraged to do so.
