The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez

Emeritus Consultant in Medicine, Mayo Clinic
Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Clinic

Mr. Henry Viscardi Jr., President of Abilities, Inc., of Albertson, N.Y. is one of America's most useful citizens. He just wrote me that, around 1951, he started a manufacturing plant with four workers to help him – all of them crippled. His idea was: what difference does it make if a man has paralyzed legs and only one arm and hand, if with his remaining arm and hand he can work each day at a bench assembling hundreds of pieces of needed apparatus.

By the end of 1953, Viscardi had 57 crippled or handicapped workers, some of them blind and deaf and epileptic; some of them with a high blood pressure and a bad heart, many of them in a wheel chair, and many on crutches. By the end of 1959, he had 348 workers who were putting out manufactured products worth $2,170,000. They were competing on equal terms with other ordinary shops.

In these last eight years, Mr. Viscardi figures that his people have contributed to their community and the nation nearly 18 million dollars' worth of services and money. In addition, just think what those jobs and pay-checks have meant to these people and their families, in dignity and self-respect and happiness. Often we in America will give a disabled man a pension, but that isn't what he wants. He wants work, and often he could do a good job. What if he does have to do his work sitting in a wheelchair? What of it if he had a high blood pressure, or a bad heart, or only one eye, or no hearing?

Today, many able men in Washington keep telling us that if we are to hold our own in the production race with Russia, we must use to good advantage all of our manpower. But we are wasting more and more of this national wealth. We are saying to millions of men and women over 65: "You are too old; go on home." Or, our employment managers by the hundreds are saying to men of 50, "You are too old;" or they are saying to thousands of epileptics, "Because a few times a year you fall down, you can't have a job." At Abilities, Inc., if an epileptic falls down, no one thinks anything of it, and no one thinks of firing him. As a result of the feeling of security that comes to the man, he tends, with time, to lose his fits.

I keep reading the strict regulations that company physicians have set up for the guidance of their employment managers. If an applicant confesses to once having had a heart attack, he is likely to be turned down.

He might some day drop dead at his desk. What of it, if for five or ten years he does a magnificent job? Mr. Viscardi employs such men just so long as they can do a good day's work. I have many friends-physicians with a large practice – who have been hard at work for years, in spite of the fact that they once had one or two bad heart attacks.

One big objection against putting disabled men to work is that if the man should drop dead while on the job, his widow might sue for some huge sum, and get it from a jury made up of the sort of kindly people who assume that the thing to do in these cases is to see to it that the widow gets her money.

As I wrote in this column a while ago, once when an employer was kind enough to give a job to an epileptic, and later, when at work, the man fell in a fit and was badly hurt, his wife sued and was awarded heavy damages. I was much distressed over this court decision and still am. Why? Because if our millions of people with physical handicaps are ever to be employed, our courts will have to do something to protect from unfair damage suits those employers who are kind enough and public-spirited enough to employ the people who are not whole, and not in perfect health.

Nowadays, I keep getting letters from widows who say, "My husband who had a big high blood pressure, dropped dead at work. Now, my friends are urging me to sue. They think maybe I can claim that the death was due to hard work, or worry over the work, or fumes from some chemical used in the plant. Do you think I should bring suit?" Although I have the deepest sympathy for the unhappy woman, I have deep sympathy, also, for the employer. I am sure he should not be sued.

What I would like to see set up in every state would be a commission of a few able physicians, health officers, experts on industrial health, and some fine public-spirited lawyers or retired judges of great good sense and probity who would meet with all widows and others who are thinking of suing; they would quickly examine their claims, and often decide in a few minutes which ones should be taken to court, and which shouldn't. Then, I would like to see some mechanism set up, perhaps for a brief review, when necessary, of these decisions, by a bank of fine judges sitting with a few wise old physicians.

Lack of Teamwork Costs $13 Million

Washington–(UPI)– Congressional auditors suggested Saturday that more than $13 million could have been saved for the taxpayers if the defense department and the civilian space agency had kept each other better informed.

The loss, said the General Accounting office in a report to the House Space Committee, came about because the two agencies, with "no evident communication," separately developed "roughly comparable missiles," one of which in the end had to be cancelled.

The missiles were the Atlas-Vega, designed by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration as an interim all-purpose launch vehicle, and the Atlas-Agena B, a Defense Department rocket "with similar payload capability and about the same (projected) date of availability."

Firemen Called Out For Backyard Snack

Watervliet, N.Y. – Firemen rushed to a downtown alarm–but paused before putting out the fire.

First, the six firemen had a quick snack with a half-dozen boys who were roasting potatoes in the back yard of the residence. They then turned extinguishers on the camp fire.
