Lyndon Johnson Emerges As Key to Labor's Chances

Washington (UPI) — Senate Democratic leader Lyndon B. Johnson (Tex.) who hasn't yet received much labor backing for the presidency, has emerged as the key to labor's chances for attaining its current No. 1 legislative goal of the election-year session.

That goal is the passage of administration-opposed legislation to expand the social security program into the new field of medical care. Labor's plan would provide hospitalization, nursing home care and some surgical benefits for almost 12 million persons over 65, financed by higher payroll taxes on employers and employees.

Johnson's support, if congress is to approve any version of this controversial plan, became virtually essential after the AFL-CIO fell flat on its face in its five-month struggle to force the house to launch a drive for it.

Rejecting by lop-sided margins all scaled-down versions of labor's proposals, the house ways and means committee instead wound up approving a limited plan of subsidized medical care which would benefit only about 500,000, to 1,000,000 needy persons over 65.

Expand Coverage
The committee-approved bill also would expand coverage and benefit rolls of the social security program but provide no across-the-board boost in benefits. The committee's action was crucial, since the legislation will be called up for almost certain house passage in mid-June under a procedure barring floor amendment.

Thus, labor's hopes for election-year passage of some version of its program now hinge first on senate action to expand the measure by amendment after it passes the house and then on ultimate acceptance by the house of senate amendments or some compromise version of them.

Two senators seeking the Democratic presidential nomination — John F. Kennedy (Mass.) and Stuart W. Symington (Mo.) — have promised to put up a senate fight for some such legislation, but labor lobbyists generally acknowledge there will be little chance of winning the fight without Johnson's support.

Not Committed
Johnson has not yet publicly committed himself on the controversial labor-backed plan.

Labor lobbyists figure the stage is set now for Johnson to make a bid for broader labor support for his still unannounced bid for the nomination by throwing his public support behind some version of labor's medical care plan. They hope he'll do so.

Vice President Richard M. Nixon, who apparently has the Republican nomination sewed up, has opposed labor's plan and endorsed the administration's plan to help per-sons over 65 pay medical bills through federal-state subsidies. This proposal is given no chance of congressional approval.

In sharp contrast to the impotency of the AFL-CIO in Checking Up On The Team Hater-Dashery As The School Year Ends—Thank and a tip of the Hatlo hat to Helena, Mont.

influencing the house ways and means committee, one of the few national labor leaders backing Johnson for the presidential nomination put on a smashing display of political power in the house.

He is William C. Doherty, president of the National Association of Letter Carriers, who is spearheading a drive for legislation to provide a 9 per cent pay boost for federal employes and postal workers.

Doherty Named
Doherty and other backers of the legislation succeeded in just two days in obtaining signatures of a majority of house members required to discharge the bill from the rules committee and force an early house vote.

Doherty, a vice president of the AFL-CIO, was named as one of the five vice chairmen of the Citizens for Johnson national committee.

James B. Carey, president of the International Union of Electrical Workers (AFL-CIO), is supporting Symington for the nomination.

The endorsement of Kennedy by Michigan Gov. G. Mennen Williams was generally taken as confirmation of reports that Walter Reuther, president of the United Auto Workers, was going to throw his support behind Kennedy in an effort to stop Johnson.

Reuther, however, reaffirmed his policy of neutrality.

He said Williams' decision to endorse Kennedy was made without his prior knowledge and has not changed the UAW's "position of neutrality." Reuther added that Kennedy, Johnson, and Symington have all made significant contributions to advancement of "important and meaningful social legislation."

U.S.-Japan Security Pact Has Hectic Background

Tokyo — (UPI) — Japan has been close to chaos since the lower house of parliament Diet approved the revised U.S.-Japan security treaty May 20. Here is the background in question and answer form:

Question: Why was the present security treaty revised?

Answer: When the original treaty was signed in September 1951, it admittedly was a one-sided treaty favoring the United States. Shortly after Nobusuke Kishi became prime minister in February of 1957, the very leftwingers who now are bitterly opposed to the new treaty started demanding that the "unequal treaty" be revised. Kishi, in his first visit to Washington, brought up the matter with President Eisenhower and long negotiations ensued.

Q. Why if the leftwingers pressed for a new treaty in 1957, they now are so opposed to it?

A. Ostensibly, on grounds the new treaty would put Japan in the middle of the cold war and make Japan part of any U.S. "military adventures." Actually, the Communists, Socialists and fellow travelers see in it a chance to topple the Kishi government and peddle Red propaganda.

Q. What is the attitude of the general public?

A. It is difficult to tell. Newspapers run many polls and none agree. Most of the large newspapers criticized Kishi for calling police into the Diet to assure ratification of the treaty. There was little said about the rough-house Socialists who kidnaped the house speaker and resorted to other violence. In Japan, it appears that it is "undemocratic" to use a parliamentary majority — and Kishi has a majority of roughly two-thirds. It's baffling to a Western observer. Newspapers also said the treaty had not been discussed fully — this, after 107 days of deliberations.

Q. When is ratification in Japan to be completed?

A. On June 19, the day President Eisenhower is to arrive. On that day it becomes fully ratified whether the House of Councilors — the upper house of parliament — acts on it or not. Unless, of course, the lower house is dissolved before then as the Socialists demand.

Q. Just what is the treaty?

A. The "treaty of mutual cooperation and security between Japan and the United States of America" is a treaty consisting of a preamble and ten short articles which replaces the Japan-U.S. security treaty signed in San Francisco in September, 1951.

Q. What is the key to it?

A. The key is Article VI. This article reads: "For the purpose of contributing to the security of Japan and the maintenance of international peace and security in the Far East, the United States of America is granted the use by its land, air and naval forces of facilities and areas in Japan. The use of these facilities and areas as well as the status of United States armed forces in Japan shall be governed by a separate agreement."

The treaty is short and vague — to ease ratification. However, also signed in Washington on Jan. 19 along with the treaty were several allied documents spelling out the treaty. These do not need ratification.
