Investment Firm Sees Nation's Best Economic Decade Ahead

By ELMER C. WALZER
 UPI Financial Editor
 New York — (U.P. — Dominick & Dominick, 90 years old, looks ahead to its and the nation's best decade between now and the firm's centennial in 1970. The investment firm's outlook is optimistic, banking and brokerage firm has published a ten-year investment forecast which was released on its anniversary Wednesday.

It looks forward to these ten years as a time when volume on the New York Stock Exchange and other exchanges will nearly double and the number of investors increase even more rapidly.

The firm is taking its own projections seriously and preparing for the increasing business in stocks by training personnel, adding equipment, and increasing space.

It is making greater use of electronic data processing and record keeping equipment. Also it is expanding its securities vault to provide space for investment clients' securities.

Noting that common stocks have been the correct investment instrument of recent years, the firm holds that steady growth and prosperity are favorable for their continued demand—but with careful selection.

"The gross national product appears to face expansion at an annual average rate of at least 3 per cent, or 40 per cent when compounded over the next ten years," the firm says.

Industries Favored
 During this period investors should allocate most of their equity funds to industries which face a growth in sales of at least 80 per cent.

The firm warns that cyclical fluctuations are inevitable, but adds that for those able to assume the risks, the period presents an opportunity for a characteristically cyclical investment is a reasonable course.

Inflation which has been a paramount market influence in recent years is losing its force and a decade of relative stability may be expected, Dominick & Dominick says.

"The skill with which monetary and other controls avoided excesses and kept the past decade free of serious recession, should increase with experience," it holds.

Rising Consumer Demand
 In the coming decade the investment bank sees rising production and demand for consumer goods which in turn will call for more powerful, better machines, and accompanying business expansion.

New drive must be added to the economy, the firm holds, looking for this change from two major sources—greater spending for research and more rapidly changing patterns of our people and their incomes.

Research by 1950 was below the $3 billion mark, the firm notes. It anticipates a $15 billion rate within a year or two and $35 billion for research by 1970.

"The accelerating scientific effort of the country," says Dominick & Dominick, "should bring a substantial increase in the stream of discoveries which obsolete old products and processes, as they bring new ones to increase sales, reduce costs, and improve efficiency."

Larger Labor Force
 Sustained growth, requiring increasing production and production efficiency is expected to come from a 15 per cent larger labor force and an increase of 75 per cent in the machinery investment per worker, plus at least a doubling of power to run the machines.

Changing patterns of population are expected to add substantially to the consumer markets of the country, "but the increasing wealth of the families of the United States is a more powerful force," says the firm.

It looks for an average family income of $9,500 by 1970, and a faster rise is looked for in discretionary income which is the amount left over after the family pays for essentials.

"The people in the United States (212 million of them by 1970) already have the highest living standard in the world; and this standard will rise higher and higher," says the firm.

Growth Firms Listed
 The booklet lists industries which the firm considers of superior growth possibilities. And an investor should not hesitate to buy a stock selling at 25 times earnings when earnings of the company are expected to increase rapidly, it says.

Earlier group listed as representing growth possibilities are electric public utilities, electronics, computers, chemicals and plastics, drugs, metals, construction and defense. Also it lists a group of stocks under the general heading "for better living"—the so-called leisure group.

Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

"I GUESS we're going to have to eat out tonight," a gas-tronome told his friend. "My wife just phoned to tell me our dinner had been bad."

"I hope you didn't lose anything else in the fire," said the friend.

"Oh, the fire wasn't at our house," explained the gas-tronome. "It was at the delicatessen shop."

No conformist is Dame Edith Sitwell, seasoned English poet and bellwether of London literati. "The reason I am called eccentric," she explains carefully, "is that I refuse to be taught my job by a lot of and lecturers."

I will not allow people to bore me, I am more alive than most. I am an electric eel in a pond full of flatfish."

Ray Harwood insists that his golf game is improving. He now shoots in the low 80s and dreams of a 70.

Wall Street Chatter

New York—Despite the recent sharp market rally, the balance of 1960 could continue to be a disappointing period for those who have overinvested their holdings, the Investors Advisory Institute indicated this week.

The Institute said that while the Dow-Jones industrials did not reach their peak until January 1960, the share price of many key industry groups had been experiencing price erosion for more than a year.

The institute blames the distortion on the fact that the industrial average is not truly representative of a broadly diversified portfolio—but is somewhat more influenced by the behavior of a smaller group of individual and often high-priced stocks that moved on the basis of independent factors.

Reynolds & Co. says that with all due respect to the accomplishments of Barnes Engineering's management, the stock seems generously overpriced in relation to current earning power.

Winslow, Cohn & Stetson believes that Utilities & Industries Corp., the former New York Water Service Corp., is an attractive purchase with slight risk on the downside. The company plans an aggressive program of acquisitions and investments in industrial companies. Winslow says.

Church Training Deadline Passes

Salem—The deadline has passed for filing for a rehearing of a Supreme Court decision permitting release for children from school for outside religious training. The Salem school district failed to ask for the rehearing.

The Supreme Court clerk's office said the deadline was 5 p.m. Tuesday.

Officials indicated the rehearing would be requested.

The court ruled in favor of a Salem parent who contended a law allowing him to have his son released for religious teaching was constitutional.

The school district contended the law was unconstitutional.
