

FLAG SERVICE—The Medford Junior Chamber of Commerce recently became the sponsor of a new service to downtown Medford merchants. On the 12 occasions each year when flags are displayed, members of the organization will put flags up in the morning and take them down again in the evening. The Jaycees will also purchase and maintain the flags, according to Flag Committee Chairman Ken Griess. Getting in a little "practice," are Jaycees Jim Pugh, Ken Griess and Wally Williams, cochairman of the flag committee.

Jaycees Start Flag Sale Program Here

A flag service program for Medford merchants is to begin immediately, according to the Medford Junior Chamber of Commerce, sponsor of the project.

The service consists of the Medford Jaycees posting each morning and taking down each evening the American flag on 12 occasions per year.

Ken Griess, program chairman, mentioned that while relieving the merchant's obligation through the program, the Jaycees will also purchase and maintain the flags.

The program is said to have received city-wide approval so that the Medford business district may have the flag abundantly displayed on all flag days during the year.

Merchants are to be contacted during the next two weeks or may telephone Ken Griess at SPring 3-6137 or Wally Williams, SPring 2-6675.

Safeguards Against Speculators in Rules

Washington, D.C. - Stringent public interest safeguards against public land speculators are embodied in proposed regulations announced by Secretary of the Interior Fred A. Seaton.

The new rules would carry out part of the anti-land speculation policy announced by the secretary last February.

The rules apply to federal government-private land exchanges handled by the department's bureau of land management.

In announcing the new rules, Seaton again called on the Congress to adopt the principles contained in a bill sponsored by the Administration which would permit the competitive-bid sale of public land tracts which have been classified as chiefly valuable for urban, commercial, or industrial purposes.

Such legislation would fill a serious need in public land management by permitting desirable development under terms that would safeguard the public interest, he said.

The proposed regulations will put into effect Secretary Seaton's anti-speculation policy by making it virtually impossible for people to use government-private exchanges of public lands for speculative purposes.

The rules cover four principal requirements:

1. People seeking government-private land exchanges must actually own and furnish proof of title to lands they offer for exchange. Until changed by Secretary Seaton, it has formerly been possible for people to make exchanges on the basis of options and purchase agreements.

2. An exchange applicant must prove that the lands he is seeking to obtain are a necessary and integral part of the economic unit which includes lands he already owns.

3. If the lands selected involve less than 1,000 acres, or

$10,000 in value, the applicant must furnish a notarized statement of two qualified people showing their opinions on the fair market values of both the offered and selected lands. Exchanges involving more than 1,000 acres or $10,000 in value will require two formal land appraisals by reputable, competent appraisers.

4. People seeking land exchanges must furnish a statement giving the complete details about any arrangements they may have made, either before or after they file their application, to sell or otherwise dispose of all or part of the lands they are seeking to acquire.

Secretary Seaton said new regulations would not impede private exchanges for their basic purpose of simplifying land ownership patterns.

The complete test of the new regulations will be published in the Federal Register. Though the matter does not require a waiting period, the department is allowing 30 days during which people may comment on the proposed rules. Written comments should be sent to the director, bureau of land management, U.S. department of the interior, Washington 25, D.C.
