

Hong Kong—There cheongsam slits seem to enhance the charm of two Malaysian-Chinese working girls as they cross a street in Singapore. After research in Singapore, Hong Kong and Taipei, three major Chinese centers, correspondents have completed a survey on the cheongsam slit. Their verdict is that Hong Kong women wear the highest slit skirts in Asia, or, for that matter, in the world. (UPI Telephoto)

Guests, Travelers Provide News in Shady Cove-Trail

Shady Cove-Trail - Visitors and travelers have provided recent news in this area. Mrs. Allen Eastgate, North Bend, Ore., who formerly lived in Shady Cove, visited recently with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Travis Littlefield, Shady Cove, and with her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Eastgate, Medford.

Mr. and Mrs. Leland E. Freeman, Sandy, Ore., were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Linden, Shady Cove.

Many guests have been in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Athel Dudley in recent weeks. Mr. Dudley's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Homer Stiles, Redmond, Ore., spent a week with the Dudleys. Later Mrs. Dudley's nephew and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. James Horner, Emmetsburg, Iowa, visited the couple. The Horners were on an extended vacation trip, and had flown from Iowa to Anchorage, Alaska. They also spent some time in Fairbanks and after leaving Oregon planned to travel in California before returning home.

Other guests at the Dudleys have been Mr. and Mrs. John Vermillion, Portland, another brother-in-law and sister of Mr. Dudley.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Novotny, Shady Cove, have returned home after spending a month in Iowa, Illinois and Wisconsin.

Sheri and Lane Watson, children of Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Watson of Shady Cove recently were in Hillsboro, Ore., to visit their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ridenour.

Mr. and Mrs. George Storey, Seattle, spent several days as guests of Mrs. Storey's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Dolf Larson, Shady Cove.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Sheppard have returned home after attending the state convention of the Lions club and auxiliaries held in Pendleton. They were delegates from the Shady Cove Lions club and auxiliary. Also representing the Lions were Everett Elrod, Trail, and Paul Bulkin, formerly of Shady Cove and now of Jacksonville.

"We are not interested with what these foreigners have to say, however qualified their opinions may be." But at this very moment, some tailors are turning out short slit cheongsams.

This has given rise to speculation even though the high slit skirts greatly outnumber the modified versions. Some think the Hong Kong girls are getting self-conscious from too much criticism. But knowing tailors offer a logical explanation. They say that if the Hong Kong housewife and family girl should really decide to make the short slit this year's fashion, it's not because of adverse public opinion, but because she's beginning to realize she can't fight the attractive dance hostess whose slit skirts can reach incredibly daring heights.

What does the male have to say about all this? The bachelor's viewpoint was, and still is, a foregone conclusion. Husbands say: "Let the bachelor girls do the 'winning' for Hong Kong. We are not interested in our wives winning the Miss Cheongsam contest."

The eye-appealing traditional dress of the Chinese daughter is correctly called the cheongsam. How these names became mixed up is unknown, though definitely it is a little too late for correction.

The cheongsam was first introduced to China during the Manchu Dynasty some 360 years ago.

Ironically, the slits up both sides of the skirt then were cut much higher, reaching as far as the waist-but the women wore long trousers. The complete outfit looked similar to that of Vietnamese women nowadays.

Of the Asian countries polled, Singapore and Taipei were Hong Kong's strongest rivals for the high slit.

So eye-catching was the slit in Taipei, it shocked Mrs. Vanna Chennault, Chinese widow of the late Lt. Gen. Claire Chennault.

Mrs. Chennault made public her criticisms of the high slit in a magazine article in which she said Chinese women in Taipei slit their skirts

Taipei - Mrs. John Eisenhower, President Eisenhower's daughter-in-law, was entertained by Chinese children in native Presidential Office building, Taipei. (UPI Telephoto)

Scientists Seek Answer To Why Music Is Music

Chicago - They're searching for the "lost chord" at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

In a study financed by the National Association of Music Merchants, MIT researchers armed with computers, electric eyes, high speed cameras and tape recorders are looking for the proverbial "lost chord" of musical tradition, trying to discover the "unknowns" in the music field.

"The research we are sponsoring at MIT may start anywhere in music, and may end somewhere or nowhere," notes William R. Gard, executive secretary of the Music Merchants group headquartered in Chicago. "We are trying to find out specifically why music is music. We are seeking to discover new avenues in music, new directions - and literally find the lost chord famed in song."

The five-year MIT project is described as exploring the mechanics of music from a purely scientific approach, ranging from mathematical analysis of musical notes to photographic studies of vibrations made by musical instruments. Experiments are conducted by MIT's department of physics and described as "Basic Research in Music."

"At a time when science seemingly is devoting all of its efforts to finding new nuclear weapons and new ways to crash into outer space, it is significant that some men of science are still interested in cultural pursuits, and seeking ways and means for more enjoyment of the finer aspects of life," Gard noted. "It will be noted that there is far more hope of finding a path to world peace in such research, than in atom smashing."

"At MIT despite all the intensive scientific research into atom and space, the faculty and students still find much need for music with eight courses taught at the institute and such extracurricular activities as a chorus, which toured Europe last year, a band, a symphony orchestra, a woodwind and brass ensemble and a glee club."

Gard summed up the new MIT music project: "The end results may produce benefits of undreamed-of importance and value to the music world - or possibly wind up in a dead end, still unable to find the elusive lost chord. But we do want to learn exactly what makes music what it is, and once establishing that, perhaps we can extend the findings to areas previously inconceivable in the music field."

The Music Merchants project is conducted in the electronics research laboratory at MIT and uses among other equipment a large IBM-704 computer, which converts music signals into numerical form. The numbers are then analyzed by a digital computer, before being further broken down into musical tones.

Photographic studies of music are also being conducted, vibrations of violin strings when played being recorded by high speed cameras at a rate of 7,000 frames per second. Similar photos are also being taken of piano and harp strings to determine what effects shortening or lengthening strings will have on musical notes. Tone studies on various musical instruments in the or-

Delegation Announced

Final plans for attending the state convention of Oregon Fraternal Order of Eagles and auxiliary members, to be held June 23-25 in Eugene, have been completed by Crater Lake aerie and auxiliary.

Elected as auxiliary delegates are Mrs. Lyle Pickell, Mrs. Stuart Forbes, Mrs. Jack Satterlee, Mrs. Theodore Weikel, Mrs. Jack Weber, Mrs. Ethyl Weed, Mrs. A. W. Ford Sr., and Mrs. A. W. Klatt.

The drill team, captained by Mrs. Ford, will assist the officers in ritualistic competition. The Hillbillies and City Slickers have been asked to participate in the parade. Because of the convention, there will be no meeting of the auxiliary June 23.

Other officers installed by Mrs. Leonard Carlson of the Phoenix Lions auxiliary were Mrs. Edward Ashton, vice-president; Mrs. James Wariner, secretary; and Mrs. John Hanson, treasurer.

Mrs. Harvey Entersby and Mrs. Edward Setzler served as pages.

Mrs. James Dziarmaga is the retiring president. Mrs. Capella's husband is the new president of Medford Lions club.

Cold Soup - New York - (UPI) - If the warm days awaken your hunger for cold soup, try this unusual jellied orange variety. Reconstitute one 6-ounce can of frozen concentrated orange juice according to label directions. Sprinkle 1 envelope of unflavored gelatin on 1/2 cup of juice in saucepan to soften. Place over low heat, stirring constantly, until gelatin dissolves. Remove from heat, stir in remaining orange juice and 2 tablespoons of lime juice. Pour into an 8-inch square pan. Chill until firm. To serve, spoon into 4 to 6 dishes or whip with a fork. Garnish with lime wedges and mint.

Before beating egg whites, let the whites stand a while. They whip best when they are as warm as room temperature. For a larger foam, add a pinch of salt before beating.

Newcomers - Shady Cove - Newcomers to Shady Cove are Mr. and Mrs. Howard Nelson and children, Kathy and Kip, formerly of Veneta, Ore. Mr. Nelson is superintendent of the Slate and Hall Construction company which has a contract for some work on the Crater Lake highway in the Trail area.

Need For Music - "At MIT despite all the intensive scientific research into atom and space, the faculty and students still find much need for music with eight courses taught at the institute and such extracurricular activities as a chorus, which toured Europe last year, a band, a symphony orchestra, a woodwind and brass ensemble and a glee club."

Gard summed up the new MIT music project: "The end results may produce benefits of undreamed-of importance and value to the music world - or possibly wind up in a dead end, still unable to find the elusive lost chord. But we do want to learn exactly what makes music what it is, and once establishing that, perhaps we can extend the findings to areas previously inconceivable in the music field."

The Music Merchants project is conducted in the electronics research laboratory at MIT and uses among other equipment a large IBM-704 computer, which converts music signals into numerical form. The numbers are then analyzed by a digital computer, before being further broken down into musical tones.

Photographic studies of music are also being conducted, vibrations of violin strings when played being recorded by high speed cameras at a rate of 7,000 frames per second. Similar photos are also being taken of piano and harp strings to determine what effects shortening or lengthening strings will have on musical notes. Tone studies on various musical instruments in the or-

Mother of Champion Says She's Proud of 'Good Son'

By GAY PAULEY UPI Women's Editor GROSSINGER, N.Y. - (UPI) - Naturally Mrs. Jens Johansson wants her son, Ingemar, to retain his world heavyweight boxing title.

But win or lose, she said, the motherly pride always will be there. "Of course I am proud that he is a champion," she said, "but I'm even prouder that he is a good son."

It was one of the rare times that Ebba Johansson, a small, shy woman of 48, has sat down with a reporter to talk about the one of her four children who grew up to world fame and riches.

The setting was the spacious lawn behind the white two-story frame house here in the Catskill Mountains, where the Johansson and her only daughter, Eva, a pert-faced blonde of 17, were sunning themselves when I arrived.

We were joined by Jens Johansson, 53, Ingemar's father, a former laborer who for the last four years has managed his son, and Bob Lantz, a friend of the family. Ingemar was sleeping.

Eva and her father speak English fairly well. Mrs. Johansson understands a little but prefers to let her daughter or husband interpret.

"Ingo is a busy person," Mrs. Johansson said, pointing out that there is plenty to do just being champion. The boxer also operates numerous business enterprises in their native Goteborg, Sweden. Since winning the title last June from Floyd Patterson, whom he meets again tonight, Ingemar has become somewhat of a television and movie star.

"But," said mama, "he is never too busy for us. . . . to take care of all of us."

Matter of fact, the fighter usually travels family plan. When he set up training camp, he moved in all but one Johansson an older brother, Henry, remained in Sweden, plus his long-time fiancée, Birgit Lundgren.

Last year at training camp, Mrs. Johansson cooked for the whole group. "Sometimes," she said, "with all the friends that dropped in, we'd have 15 or even 20 for dinner. This year, Ingemar hired a cook. He told me I should get some rest."

The fighter trains on an "eat - everything" diet, she said, ranging from traditional Swedish meat balls to Ry-King, the Swedish national bread which a friend of the Johanssons is importing, to rich desserts "which he loves." "He trains off any weight the desserts might put on," she added. Mrs. Johansson called herself a "good cook, but not a fancy one. We all like plain Swedish dishes." Johansson's parents are a modest, reserved couple - changed little on the surface anyway - by their son's prominence and wealth. "Ingemar was brought up the same as the others," said Mrs. Johansson. "My husband and I believe children should have a lot of freedom, backed by our trust. We taught them to respect others, to work hard, to take responsibility." Any one of the four was spanked if punishment seemed in order. But Mrs. Johansson likes to recall that once several years ago when she was ill, Ingemar, and the younger brother, Rolf, "did all the cooking and cleaning until I was well." She confessed she was a "little nervous" before the fight.

Correspondents Conduct Survey About Cheongsam

By GERRY XAVIER United Press International HONG KONG-UPH-Hong Kong women wear the highest slit skirts in Asia, or for that matter, the world. Taipei and Singapore? They take a back seat.

This claim is the product of a survey undertaken by correspondents in the three major Chinese centers. (And we've got the photographs to prove our case.)

Some Asian women living outside Hong Kong may protest: They wear higher slits. That's possible. For instance, there's a secretary in Kuala Lumpur who, it was told, wears her cheongsam too high for modesty. Said Not Suitable. She said the style originated with women of ill-repute in Shanghai years ago and was not suitable for women of virtue.

Hong Kong, too, has been under fire in recent months. But the remarks came mainly from foreigners passing through and were unheeded. Hong Kong girls said they were not perturbed. "We are not interested with what these foreigners have to say, however qualified their opinions may be."

But at this very moment, some tailors are turning out short slit cheongsams. This has given rise to speculation even though the high slit skirts greatly outnumber the modified versions. Some think the Hong Kong girls are getting self-conscious from too much criticism.

But knowing tailors offer a logical explanation. They say that if the Hong Kong housewife and family girl should really decide to make the short slit this year's fashion, it's not because of adverse public opinion, but because she's beginning to realize she can't fight the attractive dance hostess whose slit skirts can reach incredibly daring heights.

What does the male have to say about all this? The bachelor's viewpoint was, and still is, a foregone conclusion. Husbands say: "Let the bachelor girls do the 'winning' for Hong Kong. We are not interested in our wives winning the Miss Cheongsam contest."

The eye-appealing traditional dress of the Chinese daughter is correctly called the cheongsam. How these names became mixed up is unknown, though definitely it is a little too late for correction.

The cheongsam was first introduced to China during the Manchu Dynasty some 360 years ago.

Ironically, the slits up both sides of the skirt then were cut much higher, reaching as far as the waist-but the women wore long trousers. The complete outfit looked similar to that of Vietnamese women nowadays.

Of the Asian countries polled, Singapore and Taipei were Hong Kong's strongest rivals for the high slit.

So eye-catching was the slit in Taipei, it shocked Mrs. Vanna Chennault, Chinese widow of the late Lt. Gen. Claire Chennault.

Mrs. Chennault made public her criticisms of the high slit in a magazine article in which she said Chinese women in Taipei slit their skirts too high for modesty. Said Not Suitable. She said the style originated with women of ill-repute in Shanghai years ago and was not suitable for women of virtue.

Hong Kong, too, has been under fire in recent months. But the remarks came mainly from foreigners passing through and were unheeded. Hong Kong girls said they were not perturbed.

"We are not interested with what these foreigners have to say, however qualified their opinions may be."

But at this very moment, some tailors are turning out short slit cheongsams.

This has given rise to speculation even though the high slit skirts greatly outnumber the modified versions. Some think the Hong Kong girls are getting self-conscious from too much criticism.

But knowing tailors offer a logical explanation. They say that if the Hong Kong housewife and family girl should really decide to make the short slit this year's fashion, it's not because of adverse public opinion, but because she's beginning to realize she can't fight the attractive dance hostess whose slit skirts can reach incredibly daring heights.

What does the male have to say about all this? The bachelor's viewpoint was, and still is, a foregone conclusion. Husbands say: "Let the bachelor girls do the 'winning' for Hong Kong. We are not interested in our wives winning the Miss Cheongsam contest."

The eye-appealing traditional dress of the Chinese daughter is correctly called the cheongsam. How these names became mixed up is unknown, though definitely it is a little too late for correction.

The cheongsam was first introduced to China during the Manchu Dynasty some 360 years ago.

Ironically, the slits up both sides of the skirt then were cut much higher, reaching as far as the waist-but the women wore long trousers. The complete outfit looked similar to that of Vietnamese women nowadays.

Of the Asian countries polled, Singapore and Taipei were Hong Kong's strongest rivals for the high slit.

So eye-catching was the slit in Taipei, it shocked Mrs. Vanna Chennault, Chinese widow of the late Lt. Gen. Claire Chennault.

Mrs. Chennault made public her criticisms of the high slit in a magazine article in which she said Chinese women in Taipei slit their skirts

Calendar

Calendar notices and news for the society section of The Mail Tribune must be submitted in writing and deadline for the Sunday edition is 1 p.m. Friday. Deadline for the weekly calendar is 9 a.m. of the day of publication and for week day news is 3 p.m. the day before publication.

7:30 p.m. - Olive Rebekah lodge, Odd Fellows hall.

7:30 p.m. - Priscilla circle, Talent Methodist church, church annex.

7:30 p.m. - Ruth Esther unit, Wesleyan Service guild, home of Mrs. George G. Roseberry, 3310 Hollywood ave.

Tuesday: 9:30 a.m. - Woman's Society of Christian Service, circle 1, with Mrs. Gale Culy, 21 Washington ave.; circle 2, with Mrs. Ross Youngblood, 3235 Hollywood ave.; circle 3, First Methodist church; circle 4, with Mrs. G. F. Brood, church library; circle 5, with Mrs. Selma Mae, 819 Bennett st.; circle 6, with Mrs. Carl Kellenberger, 2201 Woodlawn ave. and circle 7, with Mrs. William Kyker, 120 Vancouver ave.

10 a.m. - Rogue Valley Navy Mothers, with Mrs. Carl Quackenbush, Foothill rd.

10:30 a.m. - Sains Valley Home Extension unit, home of Mrs. Stanley Hall, Sains Valley rd.

12:30 p.m. - Ladies of the Elks, Elks temple.

1 p.m. - Woman's Society of Christian Service circle 8, at church; circle 9, with Mrs. George A. Watson, 1838 Stewart ave.; circle 10 with Mrs. Minnie Bolen, 814 West Second st.

TRAINING-QUICKER!
A Better Job—Sooner!
YOU CAN HAVE BOTH!

Summer School AT RSB
Beginning July 5

1 and 2 Year Courses—Day or Evening Classes

ROBERTSON SCHOOL of BUSINESS
40 No. Riverside, Medford 619 S.E. Cass, Roseburg 477 Main, Klamath Falls

MAR-A-WAY'S MAGIC MAKES
WHITE RINGS and SCRATCHES VANISH

Now you can buy the same magic MAR-A-WAY that professionals use to restore fine wood finishes that have been scratched, marked or marred. Just rub on - wipe it off! MAR-A-WAY comes in walnut, mahogany, maple or neutral shades. Kit includes applicator pads. Safe—permanent—economical.

Household kit—only $1.69
Professional 1-qt. size—$8.50

MAR-A-WAY ACME HARDWARE
Available at SPECIALISTS IN HOMEWARES

Clean & Store Your Woolens NOW... "Wool-Pack" All the woolens you can store in Our BIG... PAY NEXT FALL!

Wool-Pack Container
Stored in our Refrigerated VAULTS all Season, for 2.95

Plus Cleaning and Pressing Charges.
INCLUDED IS $100.00 FREE INSURANCE
Your fine woolens will be Sanitone Cleaned... Safely stored in our refrigerated vaults, all fresh and ready for wear when needed in the fall.

Call Now for Pick-up and Delivery
Free Parking—Right at the Door!

NU-WAY CLEANERS FURRIERS
601 East Main St. Phone SP 2-9169
H. D. CHRISTENSEN

IT'S NEW! MATERNITY SWIM WEAR At LaPointe's

LaPointe's Price 10.98

LaPointe's