Cigarettes, Lung Cancer

In a recent number of the Journal of the AMA, Dr. Warren H. Cole wrote that the board of directors of the American Cancer Society have now stated that "The strong association between cigarette smoking and lung cancer has been established by an extraordinarily large amount of evidence. Twenty-eight studies have indicated that a history of smoking is more common among lung cancer patients than among those without the disease. Three follow-up studies of smokers and non-smokers have demonstrated that the death rate from lung cancer among cigarette-smokers is about 10 times as great as among non-smokers."
