New Press Noted in Editor, Publisher

The Mail Tribune and its new press were recently featured in a full page advertisement in the latest edition of Editor and Publisher, a weekly publication catering to the journalism profession.

The Walter Scott and Company, New York, the manufacturer, quoted the Mail Tribune on why the company purchased the equipment.

In part, it said "primary objective of our new installation was to meet our volume of business, eliminate as much manual work as possible and provide for future growth and expansion with a minimum of additional expense."

The advertisement, based on the Mail Tribune's choice of press, noted that the Tribune has a total weekly circulation in excess of 105,000 papers with color available in all editions. It added that a new pressroom containing more than 3,000 square feet has been erected and the stereotype department, mail room and paper storage area entirely remodeled.
