Washington—Daughters of six prominent Americans modeled a collection of original garments made from aluminum yarn at a fashion show given in the courtyard of the new State Department building. They are (left to right) Miss Bonnie Buchanan, daughter of U. S. Chief of Protocol Wiley T. Buchanan, modeling a gold and olive evening skirt; Miss Helen Bentley, daughter of Rep. Alvin M. Bentley of Michigan wearing a red barbecue two-way dress with separate skirt-apron; Miss Lynda Bird Johnson, daughter of Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson, from Texas, modeling a red corduroy jumper interlaced with gold-colored aluminum yarn; Miss Tolise Cathings, daughter of Rep. E. C. Cathings of Arkansas, modeling a gold and beige houndstooth check slack suit; Miss Karla Hennings, daughter of Sen. Thomas C. Hennings of Missouri, with a fuchsia and silver bathing suit; and Miss Anne Thomas, daughter of Rep. Albert Thomas of Texas modeling a red velvet hostess gown interwoven with aluminum yard.

Students of Guatemala Write Letters to Medford

By MARGARET SCHULER
Guatemala City, Guatemala—And here is something for a "Believe It or Not" column. A principal of a private school here, is endeavoring to raise money, among other private schools to keep a public school open. Although a great share of education is maintained by private institutions, it is said that the government cannot afford to pay salaries. University students this past week, have been threatening to strike unless their professors are paid three months' back salary due them.
When Guatemaltecos wish to protest something, they make bombs and toss them into rather harmless spots like church yards, or streets where there aren't people. Last night two such bombs were thrown, it is thought, in protest against the government.
One thing seems fairly certain however. Guatemaltecos do not again want a communist regime.
Education is a serious matter in Guatemala, that is, for certain people. Arguments against mass education and excuses for not having it, are curious to hear. As curious as the reasons for poverty. "People are happy as they are. They don't want a different way of life. They like to sit (whole families) on street corners. They are lazy," etc.
I hope a few more of the letters of my English classes

New Officers Installed

The Jackson County Home Extension committee and Alumnae committee recently held their annual joint picnic at TouVelle park.
The Advisory committee held a business meeting during the morning when final plans were made for the time management lessons which the Home Economics Agent, Mrs. Leona C. Sheehan will begin July 5 in Medford and July 7 in Ashland. Plans were also discussed for the annual officers training sessions to be held August 9 and 10.
In the afternoon, Mrs. Walter Ricks, chairman of the Alumnae committee, installed the new officers for the coming year for the Advisory committee. Mrs. Lucian Van Gordon was installed as chairman; Mrs. Glen Allen, vice chairman; Mrs. Edger Pleasant, secretary; and Mrs. William W. Jackson, treasurer. Others taking part in the ceremony were Mrs. Paul Dalton, Mrs. L. H. Wertz, Mrs. M. R. Bartling and Mrs. Rolland Smith, all members of the Advisory committee; and Mrs. Sheehan.

Former Residents Visit in Medford

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Birkland and son Danny, Coos Bay, Ore., are visiting friends and relatives in Medford, for a few days. Mr. and Mrs. Birkland are former Medford residents.
Don't discard a garden hose just because it's springing a few leaks. Punch more holes, attach it to the faucet and you have an excellent lawn sprinkler.

One of five contestants will be crowned queen of Eagle Point for 1960 at the Fourth of July celebration. Four of the entrants (above, left to right) and the names they propose for the new city park are Carolyn Hart (Eagle park), Mavis Couser (Shady Oaks park), Joan Callaghan (Little Butte park) and Sandra Smith (Hillside park). Charlotte Zimmerman (Agate park) is not pictured. A vote for a girl is a vote for a park name. Voting deadline is 9 p.m. July 3. Miss Norma Noble, last year's Centennial queen, will crown Miss 1960 at 12:15 p.m. during the park naming and dedication in front of the Eagle Point High school. Parade awards also will be made.

Women Suited For Careers In Industrial Design

San Francisco—(UPI)—Any woman looking for a "glamorous" career in the man's world might consider industrial design.
Few women, other than secretaries and research assistants, are employed in the field, but there are no barriers against the woman industrial designer. Women over 35 are accepted readily, and women who have retired to have families have no trouble getting back into the field, says Walter Landor, British-born owner of West Coast design firm.
An industrial designer's job is to shape consumer products and the packages in which these products come. Because women buy most of these goods, they especially are suited to a design career, Landor said.
"Women are better able to anticipate the psychological response of another woman to a design," he said. "And women have a greater interest in and understanding of convenience features of packaging and products."
"Women also have high color sensitivity and considerable skill, at problem solving, especially in a limited sphere—like whether a handle on a pot should be higher or lower," he added.
To be a successful industrial designer, you need skill and marketing sense, Landor said. Art and marketing experience are necessary.
Salaries range from $100 to $300 a week for a beginner. There is no limit to top salaries—at least $25,000 or $30,000 as a designer employed by a firm—and more if a designer owns a studio.
"Fringe benefits" of the job are traveling—if the firm is nationally operated—and meeting men, Landor said.

New York—Knickerbocker stages a sportswear comeback this fall, in the collection of Vicki and Don Cooper of Ulla Fashions, Inc., but they bear only slight resemblance to the clumsy plus fours of old. First cousins to Capri pants, the new hip-hugging knickers are finished with a narrow band that buttons just below the knee. This pair, done in gold heather wool, is teamed with a leopard print slip-on shirt.

Raw Fruits, Vegetables Make Up Banquet Menu

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor

New York—(UPI)—The banquet menu for a group holding its 12th annual convention this week in New York lists 35 foods—and not a chicken or steak in sight.
Two thousand members of the American Natural Hygiene Society, Inc., will sit down Saturday night to a buffet dinner of fruits and vegetables, almost all of them raw. There will be no soup. There will be nuts—cashews, almonds and peanuts.
The foods range from "A" for apples to "Z" for zucchini, include 12 vegetables, 13 fruits, dates, raisins, unsalted pot cheese, olive oil and black olives.

Journalism Grant Seeks Betterment Of Women's Pages

Columbia, Mo. — A grant from J. C. Penney company to the University of Missouri to conduct a national competition for journalism awards has been announced by the university president, Elmer Ellis in Columbia, Mo.
To be awarded annually, the $27,000 grant will be used to stimulate improvement of the quality of women's interest pages in newspapers throughout the United States and encourage interest in fashion reporting, Journalism Dean Earl F. English said.
Honoring the Penney company's founder, James Cash Penney, the gift will be employed to establish a series of awards known as the "J. C. Penney-University of Missouri Journalism Awards" for excellence in several classifications of women's interest pages and fashion writing in newspapers.
The University of Missouri journalism school will administer and supervise a competition each year which will end with presentation of the awards and cash prizes at a campus assembly and banquet in Columbia.
W. M. Batten, Penney president, said the company selected the University to administer the grant and conduct the annual competition because of the prestige and renown of its Journalism School. It is the first and oldest journalism school in the United States.
Details of the competition and the awards will be announced later.

Group Installs Corps of Officers

Officers for the coming year were installed by Mrs. Carl Elhart at a recent meeting of Women's Fellowship of Medford Congregational church.
