

They'll Do It Every Time

ON THE ROAD WHEN THE ONLY EATING PLACE HANDY IS A DOG WAGON, SOUPENA ORDERS THUS...

BUT AT A PLUSH, HIGH-TONED BOITE WITH A TWO-FOOT MENU, WHAT DOES SHE GO FOR...?

The Family Council

Editor's Note: The Family Council consists of a Judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual case history. The Council reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Sally J.—I feel trapped. But this place just doesn't exist. The marriage certificate isn't a golden key to joy...

Louis J.—When I try to do something about it, she turns chicken. Sally J.—I am 23 and have been married five years. I feel trapped and terribly frightened.

We have a 4-year-old son. I had planned to put him in nursery school this year and find myself a job. Now I find we are to have another baby. We just can't afford this child. We can hardly get along now. We haven't yet finished our payments on our furniture and already half the things are in shambles.

My husband wants to try his luck in another state, but I'm afraid we won't be any better off. The pay for his kind of work is the same everywhere. I haven't had a new dress in two years. We never go anywhere or have any fun.

Louis J.—A friend of mine tells me living costs are much lower in the community I want to move to. I feel if we can just cut down on expenses we'll be able to get our feet on solid ground.

Sally is always nagging and complaining, but when I want to do something about it all she turns chicken. She says she hates most of the people around here, but when I talk about leaving she says she doesn't want to go away from her friends.

I, too, feel trapped. After all, I'd like some fun. I don't drink or gamble. All I ask is for the nagging and yelling to stop.

But this place just doesn't exist. The marriage certificate isn't a golden key to joy... Only a contract between two individuals that they will be loyal to one another down life's stony path. If they find happiness along the way, it is simply because they love one another's company and have learned to make light of hardships and appreciate the many good things that may be found by the individual who knows how to seek them out.

Louis now wants to escape to another community in the same way he sought escape into marriage. The never-never land beckons with its lower cost of living. Yet Louis is surely aware that the expense of relocation is likely to offset the trifling difference in living costs.

It seems to us that the "trap" Sally and Louis refer to is the ordinary one of day-to-day reality. They are no more trapped than thousands of other young couples. With marriage comes children, responsibilities and the difficulties of living with another person. With each of these things, there is also great joy for mature individuals who don't expect life to be one long movie dream in color.

We can only recommend that Sally and Louis step out of the trap of their own childishness and get together to work out a plan for squeezing more enjoyment out of their daily lives. They should be aware that more money would never, in itself, solve their problems.

The vote was 8,763 for, to 4,383 against, but the constitution of the International Association of Machinists, to which Lodge 751 belongs, requires a 75 per cent favorable vote at meetings attended by at least 30 per cent of the members.

Results of the election prompted the scheduling, at the request of federal Mediator Albin Peterson, of a negotiations meeting next Wednesday at 10 a.m. The Aero-Mechanics represent approximately 25,000 employees in Washington State.
