Generator May Be Key To Fate of Amelia Earhart

Santa Ana, Calif. - (UPI) - Word was awaited today on whether a generator found in the Bay of Saipan was from the airplane in which aviatrix Amelia Earhart disappeared in 1937.

Paul Mantz, a Santa Ana air service operator who outfitted Miss Earhart's plane for an around the world flight 23 years ago, Wednesday positively identified a coral-encrusted generator as identical to one he ordered for the missing craft.

He refused to definitely say it was from the plane, however, pending a check of the serial numbers with the Bendix Corp. in New Jersey, maker of the generator.

Mantz said the generator returned here from Saipan was taken apart Wednesday and showed discernible numbers on the back. He said there was no doubt it was the model E5 Bendix Eclipse generator, the kind he ordered for the Earhart-Fred Noonan flight.

Believed Killed as Spies

Possible solution of the mystery of what happened to Miss Earhart and her navigator, Noonan, was offered last week when a radio newsman said he believed the aviatrix and Noonan crashed in the Bay of Saipan, opposite a Japanese naval base, and were executed as spies.

Fred Goerner said a team of divers found the generator in the bay along with the wreckage of a plane. Goerner said he talked with about a dozen persons in Saipan who claimed to remember the crash and execution of an American man and woman.

Party Conventions Discussed at Local Meeting of Kiwanis

A strong move to avoid vote switching at the end of roll call vote may develop in the Democratic national convention at Los Angeles next week, Robert A. Elliott, Medford insurance man, reported to Medford Kiwanians at their luncheon meeting yesterday.

This may be a key point in the nomination of the party's presidential candidate, Elliott stated. He brought out that some of Sen. John F. Kennedy's support is tied to just the first ballot.

Elliott, who was Oregon Republican central committee chairman from 1950 to 1952 and who attended the 1948 and 1952 national convocations of his party, spoke to Kiwanis members generally concerning political conventions.

Asked concerning the possible nominee at the forthcoming Democratic convention, Elliott stated, "I think, unquestionably, Kennedy has the best chance."

The speaker did point to the ability of Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon Johnson to maneuver. He mentioned the weapon that presidential candidate Johnson has in the adjournment of Congress, thereby holding up important legislation, on which he can exercise control, until after the party convalesces over. Elliott said, however, that he believes this weapon is not potent enough.

If Johnson can consolidate his strength and add to it, he has a chance, according to Elliott.

Elliott at the 1952 Republican meeting gave one of the speeches seconding the nomination of Dwight Eisenhower. The speaker made little mention of the Republican nomination convention for which there appears to be only one strong presidential candidate - Vice President Richard Nixon.

New Kiwanians

New Kiwanians introduced at the luncheon at Rogue Valley Country club yesterday were Bill Cobb of Haskins and Sells accounting firm, Dr. Kenneth Baker of California Oregon Television and Kenneth Wright of Medford branch of First National Bank.

Kiwanis President Merle Foland announced appointments of Herb Partridge as chairman of the 1961 Kiwanis Kapers and of Paul Smith as chairman of the July 27 club picnic at Elks picnic grounds.

The gathering will be at the Lloyd R. Bishop residence, 2425 Nieto way, Medford. Further information may be obtained from Mrs. Bishop at SPing 3-4256 or Mrs. Robert F. Wilcox, Normandy 4-1427.

Oregon Supreme Court Decisions

Salem - (UPI) - You can't be judged an habitual criminal in Oregon on the basis of convictions in other states unless those convictions would be felonies if committed in Oregon.

The Oregon Supreme Court in so ruling Wednesday reversed a 10-year sentence imposed on John Grinwald in Yamhill County Circuit court.

The court ordered Circuit Judge Arthur G. Walker to release the prisoner.

Grinwald was convicted in Yamhill county for obtaining money under false pretenses and sentenced under the habitual criminal statute because of three previous convictions in Minnesota - two for burglary and one for larceny.

Shouldn't be Counted

The opinion of Justice Gordon Sloan said that the two burglary convictions in Minnesota could not be counted.

Although burglary is a felony in both states, Sloan wrote that the "material requirement of pleadings and proof under the Minnesota statute would insufficient to sustain a conviction of a felony in Oregon."

The court reversed a judgment for $2500 recovered against a car owner and driver by a passenger. The opinion by Justice George Rossman reversed Lane County Circuit Judge Frank B. Reid.

The guardian of Wynath Morris sued Charles G. Williams. The accident occurred on a rainy night on the Country Club road near Eugene and the driver was blinded by bright lights of another car on a curve.

Negligence Not Shown

The high court said that gross negligence had not been shown on the driver's part, but rather that he was trying to avoid an accident as it appeared the oncoming car was in the wrong lane.

Other Decisions:
Lloyd Gilbert, et al, appellants vs. California Oregon Power Company; opinion by Justice William Perry; Judge David R. Vandenberg reversed; suit to reform a contract and counterclaim by the power company, judgment for the company of $10,849 reversed with instructions that the plaintiffs receive $1,237 for an amount due.
Columbia Brick Works vs. Joseph J. Freeman and Shirley Freeman, appellants; appeal from Multnomah county; opinion by Justice Keith O'Connell; Judge Paul R. Harris affirmed; judgment of $1,311 as the price of building materials affirmed for the company.
Judge Affirmed
Wayne Massey, et al vs. Oregon-Washington Plywood Company, appellant; appeal from Multnomah county; opinion by Justice Keith O'Connell; Judge Martin W. Hawkins affirmed; judgment of $2,088 against the company affirmed; action by several employees to recover holiday pay for July 4, 1954.
Sol-O-Lite Laminating Corporation, appellant vs. Thomas W. Allen Company; appeal from Marion county; opinion by Justice Pro Tem Ralph Holman; Judge Val S. Sloper affirmed; judgment of $1,000 for Sol-O-Lite; action to recover contract price of goods and counterclaim of breach of warranty.
Leola Stein vs. Gable Park, Inc., and A. Leppaluoto and Charles Grace, intervenors and appellants; appeal from Washington county; opinion by Justice Pro Tem Orval Millard; Judge Glen Heiber affirmed as modified; suit to foreclose a mortgage deed with a countersuit to set aside the deed; foreclosure affirmed with slight modification.
Case Reversed
Marie Ernest and Paul Ernest vs. Rose Lena Pezoldt, et al, appellants; appeal from Multnomah county; opinion by Justice Pro Tem Orval Millard; Judge Martin W. Hawkins reversed; suit to establish an oral contract to make mutual wills; decree imposing a trust on all of a decedent's property for benefit of the plaintiff reversed.

Quotes From the News

BY UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL
Barnegat Light, N.J. - Charter fishing boat Capt. Charlie Eble, describing the crash of a Navy blimp in the Atlantic: "We saw the blimp collapse in midair. She fell apart just like a banana."
Benson, Ariz. - City Attorney Fred Talmadge, after entering a sealed-off home to check the safety of the children of members of a small religious sect who are hiding in fear of a nuclear attack: "After we started to break in they realized who we were and let in with apologies. These are good people."
New York - Dr. Barbara Moore, asked which state she liked the best on her hike from San Francisco to New York: "Indiana. It's a neat, small, tidy state."
Havana - An American sugar man, commenting on President Eisenhower's signing the bill cutting Cuba's share of the U.S. sugar market: "This is it: Fur and feathers are really going to fly now."

Action To Prevent Depletion Of Starfish Numbers Suggested

Corvallis - Unless a halt is called to the "indiscriminate collecting" of some of Oregon's ocean animals such as the starfish, their numbers might be seriously depleted. This is the viewpoint of Dr. Ivan Pratt, Oregon State college zoology professor. His view is shared by many other marine scientists in Oregon.

Dr. Pratt believes it would be most advantageous economically to restrict the state if starfish, sea urchins, snails, hermit crabs and the other smaller shore crabs were left to live in the coastline waters.

The coastal businessmen have more to gain financially if tourists can see the unspoiled beaches and sea animal populations. Both have been ruined in places in California and the east coast, Pratt maintains.

Pick Up Starfish

To show they were at the coast, many beach visitors pick up several starfish and then at home "tack them on the garage door to let them dry out where they aren't of any further use," Dr. Pratt said.

Thousands of dried out starfish, snail shells and plastic-embedded hermit crabs are sold each year. Unknowingly, he said, many of these traders are decreasing the tourist trade of the future.

"Oregon has a wonderful public beaches and the sea animals shouldn't be taken away by its citizens or tourists. The sea animals should be saved just like the rhododendrons," he said.

Suggested Restriction

Restrictions on collecting should be established by the state. No collections should be made one-half mile on each side of any state park beach, Pratt insists.

Starfish, he said, are among the most harmless animals on earth. They should be looked at and left alone. On the east coast, starfish are known to do damage to commercial seafoods.

To his knowledge, starfish are not eaten anywhere in the world because there is too much calcium carbonate in the skeleton. However, some of the softer parts of the starfish relatives, such as the sea urchins and sea cucumbers are eaten by the Italians, Chinese and others. Dried out sea

Three Streets in Brookhurst Area Dedicated by City

Three new streets in the Brookhurst subdivision west of Crater Lake ave. and south of Roberts rd. were officially dedicated in ceremonies by city officials yesterday.

The three streets, which are paved with curbs and gutters, are Melody Lane, Serenity dr. and Easy st.

Cutting the dedication ribbon was Medford Mayor John W. Snider.

Participating in the ceremonies were City Manager Robert Duff, Councilmen Robert Bacaus and Ed Hall, along with Roy Wilkes, subdivision. Restricted Residential.

The new restricted residential subdivision is located on land of the Brookhurst orchard. The subdivision was started in 1959 with 22 lots along Roberts rd. The new streets have a total of 42 lots, and when additional streets are constructed, the subdivision will have a total of 185 homes, Wilkes said.

The subdivision is located between the new Wilson elementary school and the proposed new High school site. Wilkes said homes may be built to the buyer's specifications with FHA and VA loans.

Commenting on the subdivision, Duff said the new streets are a welcome addition to the city and will require a minimum of maintenance because of the construction.

Bacaus and Hall both commented on the subdivision, noting its location, and were impressed with its planning.

Caves Camp Out Planned by YMCA

A camp-out trip to the Oregon Caves has been arranged by local YMCA officials for boys between 10 and 15 years old tomorrow.

The group will leave at 9 a.m. and ride by a YMCA truck to the Caves, Bruce Burns, association youth director, said. The campers will sleep at the forest rangers headquarters in that area, he added.

Burns said the group will return about noon Saturday.

Those anticipating going are requested to bring a sack lunch for Friday noon; $2 to cover insurance, transportation and other food; a sleeping bag or blankets; and warm clothes.

Boys wishing to attend are asked to call the YMCA and register, although pre-registration is not required.

Pick Up Starfish

To show they were at the coast, many beach visitors pick up several starfish and then at home "tack them on the garage door to let them dry out where they aren't of any further use," Dr. Pratt said.

Thousands of dried out starfish, snail shells and plastic-embedded hermit crabs are sold each year. Unknowingly, he said, many of these traders are decreasing the tourist trade of the future.

"Oregon has a wonderful public beaches and the sea animals shouldn't be taken away by its citizens or tourists. The sea animals should be saved just like the rhododendrons," he said.

Suggested Restriction

Restrictions on collecting should be established by the state. No collections should be made one-half mile on each side of any state park beach, Pratt insists.

Starfish, he said, are among the most harmless animals on earth. They should be looked at and left alone. On the east coast, starfish are known to do damage to commercial seafoods.

To his knowledge, starfish are not eaten anywhere in the world because there is too much calcium carbonate in the skeleton. However, some of the softer parts of the starfish relatives, such as the sea urchins and sea cucumbers are eaten by the Italians, Chinese and others. Dried out sea

Three Streets in Brookhurst Area Dedicated by City

Three new streets in the Brookhurst subdivision west of Crater Lake ave. and south of Roberts rd. were officially dedicated in ceremonies by city officials yesterday.

The three streets, which are paved with curbs and gutters, are Melody Lane, Serenity dr. and Easy st.

Cutting the dedication ribbon was Medford Mayor John W. Snider.

Participating in the ceremonies were City Manager Robert Duff, Councilmen Robert Bacaus and Ed Hall, along with Roy Wilkes, subdivision. Restricted Residential.

The new restricted residential subdivision is located on land of the Brookhurst orchard. The subdivision was started in 1959 with 22 lots along Roberts rd. The new streets have a total of 42 lots, and when additional streets are constructed, the subdivision will have a total of 185 homes, Wilkes said.

The subdivision is located between the new Wilson elementary school and the proposed new High school site. Wilkes said homes may be built to the buyer's specifications with FHA and VA loans.

Commenting on the subdivision, Duff said the new streets are a welcome addition to the city and will require a minimum of maintenance because of the construction.

Bacaus and Hall both commented on the subdivision, noting its location, and were impressed with its planning.
