The Family Council

Editor's Note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual case history. The Council reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Peter N.—They think I'm still their little boy.

Mrs. L. N.—His girl friend has him under her thumb.

Peter N.—I am 17 and ready to go into my senior year at high school. I think it's high time my parents recognize I have a right to live my own life, but they think I'm still their little boy.

I have been dating a girl of 16 for the past year. We're not just dopey teen-agers. We're not planning to get married or anything like that. We're just plain dating.

Well, my parents have been objecting all along because of this or that reason. These reasons never make sense. Finally Mom went to Gloria's mother and told her to keep her away from me. Now Gloria's mom won't let me near the house. Gloria and I have to see one another on the sly. Wasn't that pretty stupid of our parents?

Mrs. L. N.—I wouldn't mind if Peter was "just plain dating," but it's a lot more than that. This girl has him under her thumb. He does everything she wants and the only reason they aren't married right now is that she isn't quite ready for it—this year.

At first Peter wasn't at all interested in her and used to tell me to tell her he wasn't home when she called. But she kept calling and inviting him to parties and other functions, and coming over to the house to ask questions about homework, until at last he had to give in.

I feel that when a young girl is that pushy, there's a mother behind her. I can't see any harm in my having had this out.

The Council: In theory there may have seemed to be no harm in two mothers discussing a problem that affects both their children, but it is evident from the results that it just wasn't the best thing to do.

Parents who have teen-age children simply have to accept the fact that they can't control some very important facets of their youngsters' lives. The best they can do is keep a relationship in which there is respect and communication on both sides. As long as this is maintained the youngsters may come to their parents with problems and will not balk at every suggestion made to them.

Mrs. L. N. dealt a blow to her relationship with her son when she discussed this situation with Gloria's mother. Like all teen-agers Peter cherishes his privacy and can't lightly accept the fact that these two older women discussed his personal affairs and came to a decision about a very special friendship of his.

Mrs. L. N. was right to be concerned about Gloria's aggressiveness, but she is wrong in her idea that the problem can be attacked in a crude, head-on manner. Educators and sociologists, as well as parents, are greatly concerned about the early aggressiveness of the modern young female. Most of them feel the young men do not get a chance to develop mentally and emotionally before they are snatched up by pony-tailers bent on immediate matrimony and motherhood.

A widespread trend of this sort is hard to fight. Undoubtedly, many factors in our world today give rise to this behavior pattern. It can't be pinned on one girl and one mother. Even if Mrs. L. N. should succeed in breaking up the relationship, she has no assurance that there won't be another Gloria, within a few weeks.

The best, in fact the only thing the N's can do is to broaden his interests and develop his abilities. If these take root, he will look for girl friends who help him develop further, rather than those who might act as a drag or a limiting force in his life.

25 Measles Cases Reported in County

Measles accounted for the greatest number of communicable disease cases reported to the Jackson County Health department last week.

A total of 25 cases of measles were reported, compared to a total of 49 communicable cases.

Diseases reported in the county include chicken pox, Central Point 6, Sams Valley 1, and Medford 7; mumps, Medford 1, Central Point 1, and Talent 1; measles, Central Point 6, Phoenix 4, Medford 14, and Shady Cove 1; German measles, Medford 1; and influenza, Shady Cove 6.

Local Legionnaires Attend Meeting

ford legionnaires among some 5,000 other delegates concluded the 42nd annual state convention of the American Legion of Oregon here last night.

Order of business consisted of setting policies for Legion programs and to elect new state officers, who will be announced later.

Attending from the Medford area were Clark Walker, Fred Luy, Gene Orr, Bud Fisher, Melvin McElhiney, Granvil Brittsan, J. D. Pierce, and Kenneth E. Lilly.

Featured speaker at the convention was Stephen M. Chadwick, a past national commander of the Legion from Seattle.

Presiding over the convention was Fred E. Bennett of Nyssa, department of Oregon commander, whose tenure ended as the convention closed Saturday.

More people are in hospitals for mental illness than for polio, cancer, heart disease, tuberculosis and all other diseases combined, according to the National Association of Mental Health.

Wheat Allotments Differ Slightly

Most of the 1961 wheat allotments differ only slightly from 1960 crop allotments, according to Albert L. Straus, chairman, Jackson County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation committee.

This was so, the committee explained because the national acreage allotment remains at the minimum 55 million acres which has been in effect for the past six years. The farm allotments are based primarily on past wheat production history, Straus added.

Official notices of farm allotments for the 1961 wheat crop were mailed to farmers Friday, he noted.

Minor Quake Jars California Area

Santa Ana, Calif. — (UPI) — A minor earthquake jolted a small section of Orange county Thursday night, startling a number of residents but apparently not causing any damage.

The California Institute of Technology at Pasadena recorded the shock at 7:37 p.m. (p.s.t.) on its seismograph. The temblor had a magnitude of less than 4 on the Richter scale.

Police said scores of residents here and in surrounding areas telephoned, inquiring about the quake.
