Group Releases Over 42 Million Salmon, Steelhead

Portland — (AP) — Oregon's salmon and steelhead releases from fish commission hatcheries for the first six months of 1960 totalled more than 42 million fingerlings.

The liberations were made, according to Ernest R. Jeffries, director of fish culture, as a supplement to natural fish stocks. Liberations were made from 16 hatcheries located on key rivers throughout the state.

Coastal rivers received 1,725,000 fingerlings of which 105,000 were steelhead, 309,000 fall chinook, 226,000 chums, and 1,114,000 silver salmon.

The main Columbia river and small tributaries received 26,000 spring chinook, 31,896,000 fall chinook, 103,000 steelhead, 1,230,000 chums, and 2,658,000 silvers for a total of 35,711,000 fish.

Willamette river was stocked with 4,663,000 fingerlings. Contributions to this area were 3,935,000 spring chinook, 201,000 fall chinook, and 528,000 steelhead.

The Family Council

Editor's Note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual case history. The Council reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Clara G. — He blames me for his failure.
Fred G. — She blasted me into this thing.

Clara G. — Should a wife be blamed for her husband's failures? My husband blames me for his.

Two years ago I encouraged Fred to go into a small business with his cousin. It looked promising and I felt it was our only chance of ever getting into a better income category. Fred's job seemed to offer little opportunity for advancement.

Well, the enterprise failed and we find ourselves in debt. Fred has gotten morose and hopeless. But I only tried to do what I thought was right. I couldn't foresee some of the mistakes Fred would make. We are still young (in our 30s) and healthy. We can pull ourselves out of this mess — if only Fred would stop blaming me.

Fred G. — Clara sure is understanding things when she says she "encouraged" me to go into business. She practically blasted me into it. For some time she had been nagging me to get out of my "rut." It just happens I liked my job and the people I worked with. Then my cousin came along with this idea. I was only mildly interested at first, but Clara kept hammering away until I got all steamed up about it.

After I was in the business a few weeks, I saw that things could never work out right. I wanted to get out immediately, but Clara kept saying, "You've gone so far, it would be foolish to quit now." I didn't want to be a quitter. And now look what's happened!

The Council — No, we don't think a wife should be blamed for her husband's failures — but neither should she be so quick to pin the failure on him. If the business had succeeded, Clara probably would have been happy to take her share of the credit.

From both accounts, it appears that Clara took too much upon herself in pushing her husband into this enterprise. We think a wife should give advice on business and job problems occasionally, but the final decision should be the husband's. It is he who must shoulder the responsibilities and do the work. If he goes into an enterprise halfheartedly and on his wife's steam, the chances of success aren't good.

Fred is apparently a less aggressive, enterprising person than his wife. He is not the kind of person who wants to take risks and it is unfair to force him into such a situation.

Clara makes a big mistake when she makes her happiness dependent upon something that her husband can do only if he has the desire and temperament for it. She would be a happier, more fulfilled person if she channeled her energies into things that she can accomplish on her own. Possibly she is the kind of a woman who can make a success of some small home business, or who could find satisfaction in being a community leader. Her income may not be in the higher brackets, but she would enjoy other satisfactions.

Fred should learn to be his own man. By this we mean he should never let anyone pressure him into doing things against his better judgment. If he lets himself be moved by others, he will be unable to see any enterprise through to success. When he takes full responsibility for his own life, he will be able to be proud of any success he achieves and will learn by his failures or mistakes. He won't "blame" anyone — not even himself because that is a waste of energy.

Dr. Busch To Instruct Special Workshop Course

Ashland-Dr. Phyllis Busch, from the school of education at New York university, will be the instructor for a special workshop seminar on science in the elementary and secondary school at Southern Oregon college July 18 to 29.

The two-week course will deal with the problems and methods in selecting and organizing materials for teaching science in the grade and high schools. Emphasis will be placed on the proper use of community resources and how field trips and laboratory experiences can enhance science instruction.

Aug. 1 through 12 four additional seminars will be held as a part of the summer workshop program at Southern Oregon college.

Special Materials
Music in the elementary school will be instructed by Helene Robinson, associate professor of music at SOC.

Special Crews Battle Big Fire In Junetta Area

By United Press International
Special firefighting crews from the U.S. Forest Service joined the fight Saturday to contain a fire that had spread through 150 acres of old-growth Douglas fir in the Bohemian district of the Cascades east of Cottage Grove, in the Junetta Ridge area of the Umpqua national forest.

The mobile group, which specializes in combating forest fires in the Pacific Northwest, hoped to bring the blaze under control late Saturday.

A total of 260 men had been called into action by noon Saturday. They had pressed into service three bulldozers, four tankers, 30 power saws and six portable pumps in an all-out effort to prevent the flames from further spreading. Officials indicated cause of the fire was under investigation.

Firefighters brought a 15,000-acre range fire southeast of Baker under control late Friday after it had momentarily threatened the town of Durkee.

This course will feature special materials available for the teaching of music in the lower grades and the use of keyboard experience for the students.

Art in the elementary school will be given by Ruth Halvorsen of the Portland public school system. Opportunity will be provided in the workshop for work on particular areas of interest in the field.

Three instructors from Chico State college will offer special seminars on Shakespeare for this two-week period. Dr. Hugh M. Bell, Dr. Arthur Solomon and Dr. Kenneth Clarke will offer human relations in Shakespeare and Selected Shakespearean Plays with part of the program including attendance at the four plays being offered this summer by the Oregon Shakespearean Festival association.

During the post session Aug. 15 to 26 social science, language arts, and Spanish in the elementary school will be offered for college credit. Dennis Hannan, associate professor of languages at SOC, will instruct the Spanish seminar.

Inquiries concerning Southern Oregon college summer workshops may be directed to Dr. Bill A. Sampson, director of summer sessions.

Problems of Older Worker TV Subject

Problems of older workers in Oregon will be the subject of "Dateline Statehouse" at 10:45 o'clock tonight over KBES-TV, Medford.

Facing the television cameras will be Norman O. Nilsen, commissioner of labor, and Ray A. Ziegler, director of the senior worker division of Oregon's bureau of labor. The 1959 Oregon legislature passed a law prohibiting discrimination in hiring solely because of age. This law is administered by the labor bureau.
