

Nine Tips Given By Marine Board For Safe Boating

Salem - Because more and more people are becoming boat-minded during the summer months, the State Marine board has issued several tips for safe boating.

Too many people fishing out of or riding in a boat is dangerous, according to Marine Director Holt Rittenhouse. Never carry more people than the boat was intended to carry, he cautions.

Among the safety suggestions are the following:

1. Watch the weather and know the tides. Coastal bars usually become choppy on the ebb.
2. Leave the liquor ashore.
3. Be sure your boat is equipped with proper lifesaving devices. If you have non-swimmers aboard, make sure each wears an approved life jacket. Carry an adequate supply of fuel.
4. In small boats, assign a place to each person and do not permit any seat changing after leaving the dock.
5. It is foolhardy for a small boat to venture out in the ocean even in the fairest of weather.
6. Don't fish unfamiliar waters without first obtaining reliable local information about what unknown hazards you may encounter. If there is a Coast Guard station in the area follow their advice.
7. Don't leave shore in a leaky or poorly constructed boat.
8. Take some time to learn proper boat handling and how to save yourself if you should fall overboard.
9. If you capsize stay with your boat. It will hold you up and will make it easier for rescuers to locate you.

Above all, Rittenhouse concludes, use courtesy and common sense afloat. Help others in trouble and report all accidents as soon as possible to the authorities, he adds.

CRASH SURVIVORS—Russia shot down an American airplane July 1 over the Barents Sea and two survivors were picked up, according to Radio Moscow. They identified the survivors as Lt. Lt. Freeman B. Olmstead, Elmira, N.Y., left, and 1st Lt. John R. McKone, Tonganoxie, Kan., right. They were among six crewmembers of a U.S. Air Force RB47 reconnaissance bomber that has been missing since July 1 and was feared to have crashed near the Soviet coast. (UPI Telephoto)

Financial Councillng Firm Queries 100 Business Leaders

By ELMER C. WALZER
UPI Financial Editor

New York - UPI - Making money and saving it are two mighty different things, and many a tycoon would welcome an adviser who'd tell him how to stow away a few nickels for a rainy day.

These observations are part of a survey made by Israel Utermann, a New York financial counselor whose agency, Utermann Associates, is planning to expand its personal financial advising services.

In the course of making his survey, Utermann ran into one client making $100,000 a year for five years who today has no capital at all. Another making $15,000 a year was able to put away $1,000 or $2,000 a year.

Results Satisfy

He sampled 100 business executives in the New York area in his survey. Of the 100, only 32 said they had a financial program that enabled them to keep expenses in reasonable control, and at the same time accumulate savings and other capital assets.

And out of the 32 that had a financial program, 21 said they were satisfied with the results and 11 weren't.

A total of 57 said they had professional help in planning their finances. Most of this help came from insurance men with stock brokers second and lawyers and accountants tied for third. A few used mutual fund salesmen and bankers.

There were only a few replies to the question whether professional advice was slanted to insurance or some other line, and about one third of those who answered thought there was.

Confusing Advice

The final question brought a full response. It was the question: "Do you feel that there is a place, in this age of specialization for a financial counselor who is a well-trained general practitioner, with a broad knowledge of personal finance?" To that 89 answered "yes" and 11 "no."

Many men, it was found, take advice from more than one financial specialist. And a large number agree that such advice can be confusing, especially when the specialists disagree.

A few executives didn't think it was possible to find an unbiased adviser. They felt if there were such a man, he'd charge them too much.

Now suppose the business man hires a personal financial adviser.

As Utermann sees it, there are just two things to consider—income and outgo.

Outgo Important

The income can be padded out here and there by saving in life insurance, loan plans, deferred compensation, and compensation in material goods.

It's the outgo that makes the difference. One deducts the fixed expenses with generous estimates of such variables as doctors' bills and the like.

After the necessary costs are taken out, there remains one item that's really important. It's called miscellaneous—and it's highly variable.

There's only one formula to the whole thing and it's this: "Take out 10 or 15 per cent for savings." After that you make what's left fit the bills.

From what it sounds like in this direction there's no

Man Arrested for Disorderly Conduct

James Walter Gibbs, 34, of 1375 South Columbus st., was lodged in the Jackson county jail yesterday on charges of disorderly conduct, state police reported.

State police said they went to the Gibbs residence after receiving a report from his mother that he had become belligerent while drinking and displayed a knife. Gibbs' brother, a police said, then displayed a pistol and ordered Gibbs out of the house.

State police said Gibbs then tried to break down the door, after he had armed himself with a gun. When officers arrived, Gibbs had put away both weapons.

Policeman Needed Help From Cohorts

Nogales, Ariz. - A member of the Tucson police department's Counter Intelligence Corps asked Nogales police for some help in solving a case.

The officer said he lost his badge while visiting Nogales.

HOLDING SALESMAN

Chicago - UPI - Donald Lawson, 33, confessed that he held up a shoe store June 20, tied up the manager and three employees in a back room and emerged to find customers waiting. "I sold seven pairs of shoes before I could get away," he said.

Chambers to Double Efforts To Prevent Some Legislation

Local chambers of commerce will have to double their efforts if they are going to prevent the "give-away" type of legislation from passing Congress when it reconvenes Aug. 15.

So said Jim Burgess, northwest representative for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, who spoke at the local chamber's roundtable luncheon in the Jackson hotel Monday.

Burgess said that some of the election-year give-away legislation which Congress will be considering includes federal aid to education, housing, minimum wage, medical care for the aged, and expansion of the social security.

Usually, he said, the political action committees of various chambers can relax about this time of the year. But, it is different this year, he said, with Congress reconvening after the political conventions.

Purposely Adjourn

Members of Congress who favor the give-away legislation, he said, purposely adjourned Congress until after the conventions so that they would have a better chance of pushing this legislation through.

If they hadn't done this, he said, the legislation would have been "dead certain" to die in committee. Now they have time to reactivate it, and again get it on the floor of their respective houses of Congress.

He did not single out any one party as being responsible, but said, "both parties will be a part of it."

If this kind of legislation should pass, he cautioned, it will mean a raise in taxes and make it more difficult than ever for a businessman to stay in business.

Double Efforts

Burgess said that the political action committees of various chambers should double their efforts between now and Sept. 1, or the "conservative gains" during the past two or three months will be in jeopardy.

Efforts of local chambers of commerce to influence Congressmen do have some effect, Burgess said. He cited the passing of the Landrum-Griffin labor bill last year as an example of this influence.

Before passage of the labor legislation bill, he said, various representatives of the chamber in Washington were told that the bill didn't have a chance, that sentiment among members of Congress was about 4-1 against it.

But at the last minute there was a turn-around, he said, and the bill passed by a "landslide." Several Congressmen who had been opposed to the bill, but who voted in favor of it when it came to a vote, were asked why this was.

In Favor of Bill

Every one of them, he said, answered that they had received letters from their respective business communities that were 8 to 2 in favor of the bill. They told Chamber representatives, Burgess said, that "your mind had to change you would have to."

Burgess said this points out just how important it is that businessmen communicate with Washington, "particularly during an election year."

He implied that the chamber is not necessarily opposed to all social legislation, but did say that it opposes the way some of this legislation is being prepared for presentation to Congress.

The chamber does not necessarily oppose free medical care for the aged, he said, but does not think it should be an across-the-board grant to all persons. It is proposed that it would include everybody, Burgess noted, when it should probably be on the basis of need. He added that there is room for "compromise."

Burgess pointed out that the Action Course in Practical

Politics for businessmen is a good course for interesting businessmen and others in politics at all levels.

He cited some examples on the effectiveness of such discussion groups in other parts of the country and said there is plenty of time between now and Nov. 8 for a couple more of these groups to be organized here.

Burgess stressed the need for businessmen to take an interest in politics at all levels and to become active in the party of their choice.

COLLISION KILLS THREE

Montebelluna, Italy - UPI - A train loaded with troops collided Monday with a stationary passenger train, killing three Italian soldiers and injuring 52 persons, including 46 soldiers.

Why you need Allstate collision insurance:

1. Your modern car costs more to repair
 2. There may be no "other guy" to foot the bill
- Fancy fins and grillwork can turn even a small accident into an expensive repair job. Simply repairing a smashed rear end could easily cost you $150 ... more than three yearly average premiums for Allstate collision insurance.
- Your parked car may be damaged by a hit-and-run driver ... and you'd be stuck with the bill. Or perhaps a blowout or a skid could wreck your car, no matter how carefully you drive.

Find out how Allstate can help you protect your investment in your car

Talk to an Allstate Agent. Ask him to show you how Allstate Collision Insurance helps you pay for damage to your car caused by collision or upset ... and how Allstate's Comprehensive insurance covers practically any other hazard that could damage your car.

Be sure to ask about Allstate's low rates too. Allstate's top-quality protection, low rates, and fast claim service have convinced over 4,000,000 car owners that Allstate is their best buy in auto insurance.

Thornton Rules on Labor Payments

Salem - UPI - A labor union must pay taxes to the employment department on the wages of the union's officers even though they are regularly employed by the federal government.

Attorney General Robert Y. Thornton issued this opinion Monday. He said the fact that employees may not possess the necessary qualifying weeks of employment or sufficient total base year wage credits does not relieve the employer from paying the taxes due the state upon their wages.

This is true even though no applications are made for unemployment benefits, Thornton said.

HIS OWN LAWYER

Los Angeles - UPI - Deputy County Public Defender Melvin Pierovich, 50, defended himself in divorce court today. His wife, Karlyn, 40, was granted a divorce and custody of their three children.
