

PART OF BEAUTIFUL KITCHEN—As the most recently-developed of major electrical appliances, home food freezers have progressed much more rapidly than the range, refrigerator, or washer-dryer. Today, after only a few years on the market, they are up-to-date in performance and appearance. The new-home builder will find freezers built in color and style to blend with the rest of her built-in kitchen appliances—and to make a family living center both beautiful and efficient.

Corners of Home Freezer Should Be Checked Often

It's a good idea to check the back corners of the home food freezer every few months for foods that may have been put away and forgotten. If it isn't practical to serve them to your family before the storage time limit expires, you can thaw, cook, and refreeze those uncooked frozen vegetables, meats, berries, and fruits.

These foods, thawed, cooked or made into main dishes or preserves, may then be cooled, refrozen, and stored for several more weeks or months.

May Be Combined
Uncooked thawed foods may be combined in casseroles or stews and stored in the freezer for at least another month. Raw chicken or other poultry which has been over-long in the freezer may be thawed and cooked, then sliced and refrozen. It will retain its flavor and food values for about six weeks in this way, and comes in handy for drop-in guests and quick lunches.

Uncooked frozen fruits and berries can quickly be thawed and made into jam. Or if pies are a favorite, prepare the fruits for pie-filling and freeze in separate containers. To make the most of the economy features of the freezer, take frequent inventories and use up last season's frozen foods to stock up on quick-to-fix meals-ahead.

Safecrackers Tell News of Robbery

Twin Falls, Idaho (AP)—Safecrackers with an apparent yen for publicity stole $327 in cash early today from Young's Dairy here.

After they made their getaway they stopped by a Twin Falls radio station to let newsmen know all about it.

When announcer Bill Warren reported for work about 5:30 this morning he found a note, hand-written in pencil, stuck in the jamb. It said: "There has been a robbery at Young's Dairy. The safe was blown open, so forth and so on."

When Warren called police for further details he discovered officers knew nothing about the safecracking. Investigation proved the note was right.

Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

A VISITING ORIENTAL encountered considerable difficulty translating some American maxims into his native Japanese, but "Out of sight, out of mind," gave him no trouble at all. "This means," he jotted in his notebook, "The idiot is unseen."

Just before his death, Moses Helen Ferris, the operator of a big filtering plant, willed his brain to a scientist. The scientist was said to hear of the man's death but overjoyed to get his brain. After all, it was the scientist's first chance to see a filtering man's thinker.

"In America," Robert Benchley like to point out, "there are two classes of travel—first class and with children."

Food Freezer Is Good Storage for Lunch Sandwiches

With a home food freezer there'll be no more fixing lunches last thing at night or getting up early every morning to do it. Enough sandwiches, fruits, desserts, and drinks can be prepared to keep the whole family in lunches for a whole week ahead—and it only takes an hour. Then just take the foods from the freezer in the morning, pack them in boxes or bags and the family is on its way.

Frozen sandwiches, cake, cookies, and pie thaw in two or three hours and retain all their original moistness and freshness. You can even freeze whole fruits and pop them into the lunch box at the same time.

Sandwiches may be made with fresh or frozen bread. Frozen bread slices spread with a dash of mustard, but should be taken from the wrapper only two or four slices at a time to retain maximum moistness.

For best results, spread the bread with softened butter or margarine and try spicing it up with a dash of mustard, catsup, chili sauce, horseradish, or pickle relish. Mayonnaise and salad dressing are not desirable in frozen sandwiches.

There are a variety of sandwich fillings that freeze well. Sliced cooked meat, meat loaf, chicken, and cheese are ideal. Spreads made of chopped or ground meat, canned fish, jelly, peanut butter, and egg yolk mixtures freeze well. Egg whites when cooked toughen in the freezer. Cool sandwich fillings before making sandwiches.

You can freeze nearly anything you can bake—cakes, cookies, bread, coffee cake, or sweet rolls. They'll taste freshly baked, warmed up from the freezer a few weeks later.

Commercially baked rolls and breads may be frozen in the original, unbroken wrapper, but should be rewrapped in moisture-proof, vapor-proof package to store longer than a week.

Brown and serve rolls may be frozen and stored for a week or so and special sandwiches may be frozen and stored a week. Put frozen sliced bread right in the toaster, and it comes out golden brown.

For baked bread, let cool completely then wrap in packages and freeze. After storing up to 12 months, thaw in wrapper (except plastic wrappers) in slow oven for 30 minutes.

If unbaked, prepare yeast dough and let rise to double in bulk. Place bread in pans ready for baking, wrap well in moisture-proof, vapor-proof package and freeze. Shape rolls, then grease well, and freeze on baking sheet. Package after freezing and store rolls only one week. When ready to use the bread or rolls, thaw at room temperature and allow to rise until double in bulk, bake as usual.

Craig requested that another plane come alongside and inspect the damage. An F4B Fury that was behind Craig was instructed to fall in with him at 1,400 feet. Cmdr. Ralph Hoffmeister, Crow's Landing commanding officer, said the Fury apparently flew into the rear of Craig's Demond.

Craig ejected and parachuted to a hay field, suffering superficial burns. The Fury pilot apparently was knocked out on impact with the other and his body was found in the wreckage of his plane.

The dead pilot was Lt. (jg) Walter I. McDonnell Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter I. McDonnell Sr., 2640 N.E. Flinders, Portland, Ore. He was stationed at Moffett Naval Air Station near San Jose, Calif.

The other pilot, Lt. (jg) W. D. Craig, 25, Los Hills, Calif., was making practice carrier landings here when the landing signal officer reported that his F-3H Demond had blown a tire on takeoff.

Medford police cleared the theft of several soft drink boxes and a number of bicycles Wednesday when they took into custody two juvenile boys.

The boys, ages 9 and 10, were apprehended in the act of taking boxes from the rear of the Coca-Cola plant, 600 North Grape st., about 1:45 p.m.

The boys had two bicycles in their possession and a check by police revealed that they were stolen. On interrogation, the youths admitted to police that they had taken between them about eight bicycles during the past two days. All of the bicycles have been recovered.

The youths were released to their parents.

Navy Pilot Killed As Jets Collide In California Air

Crow's Landing, Calif.—One Navy pilot was killed and another was slightly injured Wednesday night when their single engine jet bombers collided in darkness near their Naval auxiliary landing field in Stanislaus county.

The dead pilot was Lt. (jg) Walter I. McDonnell Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter I. McDonnell Sr., 2640 N.E. Flinders, Portland, Ore. He was stationed at Moffett Naval Air Station near San Jose, Calif.

The other pilot, Lt. (jg) W. D. Craig, 25, Los Hills, Calif., was making practice carrier landings here when the landing signal officer reported that his F-3H Demond had blown a tire on takeoff.

Craig requested that another plane come alongside and inspect the damage. An F4B Fury that was behind Craig was instructed to fall in with him at 1,400 feet. Cmdr. Ralph Hoffmeister, Crow's Landing commanding officer, said the Fury apparently flew into the rear of Craig's Demond.

Craig ejected and parachuted to a hay field, suffering superficial burns. The Fury pilot apparently was knocked out on impact with the other and his body was found in the wreckage of his plane.

All Facilities At Crater Lake Are Now Open

All facilities at Crater Lake National park are now open for visitor use, Otto M. Brown, park superintendent, has announced.

Cool spring weather has prolonged snow melting, delaying the process of opening trails and campgrounds, he noted. Many of the deeper drifts probably will remain most of the summer.

The park's four campgrounds are receiving heavy use, Brown reported. Mazama campground, a Mission 66 project, has been filled to near capacity since July 2. Overflow campers use the Annie Springs campground nearby.

Campsites in the Rim Village campground still are interspersed with snowbanks, he said, but many visitors have used the camp sites this year.

Park Roads Open
All park roads and trails are open. The lake trail leading to the boat landing on Cleetwood Cove was opened July 9, Brown said. The old trail, which starts from Rim

Village, will no longer be used.

Launch trips around Crater Lake are operated by the Crater Lake National Park company daily, mornings and afternoons, he said. A naturalist accompanies visitors on the trip to explain features of the lake.

Shuttle boat service also is provided between Cleetwood Cove and Wizard Island, he noted, and rowboats may be rented by those wishing to travel alone.

In addition to conducted boat trips, naturalist services include talks at Crater Lake lodge and campfire program at the Rim Village community house, and at Mazama campground. Talks are illustrated with colored slides, Brown noted.

Exhibits in Buildings
Also available are exhibits in the building at Rim Village and in Sinnott Memorial Overlook building, where geology talks are presented five times each day. A morning naturalist-conducted walk starts at the exhibit building and follows either the Discovery Point or Garfield Peak trails.

The Crater Lake National Park company provides a guided bus tour each morning around the 35-mile rim drive. Hotel accommodations are available at Crater Lake lodge, and a limited number of non-housekeeping cabins are available, Brown noted.

The regular park season closes Sept. 15, but roads from the south and west entrances are maintained to Rim Village throughout the year.

New College at Oxford University, England, was founded in 1379 and its cloisters were consecrated in 1400.

Motor buses operated by 77 urban transit companies in Canada in 1958 increased to 4,630 from 4,514 in 1957.

On a clear, dark night about 2,500 stars are visible to the naked eye.
