

The Family Council

Editors Note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual case history. The Council reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Mr. T. F.-I think Larry's trying to spite me.
Larry F.-I'm just the type who has to goof.

Mr. T. F.-My problem concerns my 23-year-old son, who recently came into my business with me.

Larry isn't a stupid kid by any means. In fact he did quite well at college. But he does many things in working for me that I can only call stupid. He admits it himself and when I point it out to him, he says he can't imagine how he could have done anything like that.

He says he wants to help me build up the business and eventually I want to turn it over to him. But how can I when he acts like that?

Larry F.-I don't know why my father should think I'm trying to be spiteful when he knows as well as I do that I gave up something I wanted to do very much in order to go into business with him. The fact is that I don't care very much for business, but Dad persuaded me that it would be the best thing. Besides, I felt sorry for him because he is getting on in years and can't keep shouldering so much responsibility all by himself.

I do my best and I think Dad ought to be satisfied with it. I'm just the type who has to goof occasionally. He'll just have to accept it.

The Council: When an individual again and again makes errors he can see as stupid, there is good reason to believe some other "self" is at work within him—goofing while his conscious will is trying to do the right thing.

Most of us can accomplish more than we believe we can if we put our full hearts and minds to it. But if we are divided or uncertain, the going may seem impossibly difficult. Obstacles become mountains and problems become hopelessly complicated. There may also be a tendency to make many small careless errors.

As we get this picture Larry was pressured, rather than persuaded, by his father to go into the business. This may not have been entirely the father's fault. Some individuals want to be pushed around rather than to make their own decisions and accept the full responsibilities for them.

Instead of concentrating on his errors and accepting his tendency to goof, we think Larry could be far happier and more successful by coming to terms with himself. He should recognize that in life we must all sacrifice something to get something else we want more.

It would help Larry to make a list of all the arguments for and against being in his father's business and another list of all the arguments for and against his leaving it and doing the other thing he wants. He should weigh one list against the other and make a choice. Concern about his father may be an important factor, but he should make up his mind whether or not he considers it the most important factor. When he comes to a decision based on his best reasoning, he will find more pleasure in working and will make fewer errors.

Forest Service Treats Klamath for Sagebrush

Yreka - District Ranger Lester D. Clark of the Klamath National forest described here recently the problem of eradicating sagebrush on forest service land.

"In order to put these idle lands into production we have been eradicating the sagebrush and planting the areas to grass for a number of years," Clark said.

"We are able to feed one cow on about two acres each month on land where grass has been planted. While on land supporting sagebrush it would take about 30 acres to feed the same cow for one month.

Forest Service Treats Klamath for Sagebrush

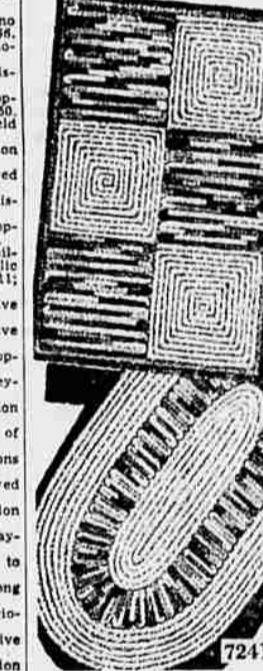

"More cattle can be grazed on smaller areas and the better feed produces a higher animal," he said.

He added that "in addition to benefiting the stockman, range revegetation benefits the sportsman by providing badly-needed fall and spring feed for wildlife."

According to Clark, this spring about 500 acres of sagebrush were sprayed with a 2, 4-D solution. A Buffalo turbine unit mounted on a wagon was used to spray the sagebrush. This allowed a fine mist of solution to be blown out. This resulted in control of the spray so that no drift was blown over into adjacent private lands.

"Results of the spray appear to be excellent," Clark pointed out, "and in some cases the sagebrush could be seen to begin wilting several hours after application."

Beck Challenges Basic Rule Violation Bail Schedule Has Notable Change

Olympia - AP - Attorneys for former Teamster President Dave Beck Thursday challenged the Washington State Supreme Court's right to affirm a criminal case by a 4-4 decision.

Beck's attorneys asked the court to strike an order upholding Beck's grand larceny conviction on grounds that the court's action had been unconstitutional and that it had not rendered an opinion.

In two hearings on the Beck case, eight Supreme Court judges have been evenly divided. Each time the court said a 4-4 decision had the effect of upholding a lower court verdict.

Beck was convicted in King County Superior Court in 1957 of having pocketed $1,900 from the sale of an automobile owned by the Teamsters Union.

The split in the Supreme Court resulted after Judge Harry Ellsworth Foster disqualified himself because he once had been an attorney for the Teamsters.

A hearing on Beck's motion to strike the court's order upholding the 4-4 decision upholding Beck's conviction was set for Sept. 16.

Wisconsin Picnic Set in Brownsville

An all-state picnic will be in Brownsville Sunday, July 24, for all former Wisconsin residents.

Along with a potluck dinner, at which about 200 persons are expected, baseball and other picnic activities are being planned, according to Robert Kemnow, president of the Wisconsinites in Oregon.

Activities will start at noon with the dinner. Some people are expected to arrive Saturday evening with their trailer houses, Kemnow said. Arrangements have been made for trailers to be parked overnight in the city park, site of the celebration. Since overnight staying is being provided for trailer travellers, he noted, persons may have the opportunity to attend church Sunday morning.

Beck Challenges Basic Rule Violation Bail Schedule Has Notable Change

The most notable change in the new bail schedule which will become effective in Medford July 17 is in the amount of bail to be assessed for basic rule violations.

Medford's new bail schedule will be slightly different than that recommended by the Oregon Supreme court. Municipal Judge Alan B. Holmes said he finds some of the recommended bails "excessive," and he revised them before adopting the schedule for the city.

The bail to be assessed for basic rule violations is $10 for speeds up to 10 miles over the designated speed; $25 for speeds from 11 to 20 miles over the designated speed; $50 for speeds from 21 to 30 miles over the designated speed; and $100 for speeds in excess of 30 miles above the designated speed.

The existing bail schedule has provided for fines of $10 for each 10 miles above the speed limit up to 40 miles over the designated speed. Above 40 miles over the designated speed the bail has been $50.

This new schedule is the same as that recommended by the supreme court.

The bail for all kinds of hit and run accidents has been set at a standard $100. Under the existing schedule the amount of bail has ranged from $25 to $100 depending on the type of accident. The supreme court had recommended a $150 bail for all hit and run violations.

The minimum bail for defective equipment has been raised from $5 to $10 and the minimum bail for excessive noise has been raised from $5 to $10 for the first offense.

A minimum of $5 bail for all licensing violations has been set by the court with the exception of driving with switched plates or tabs, $25, and driving with driver's license suspended, $100. The supreme court recommended that the latter item have a minimum bail of $150.

A minimum bail of $5 has been set for pedestrian violation.

The minimum bail for disobeying a traffic sign has been raised from $5 to $10. The $10 bail for disobeying a traffic sign will remain the same.

Improper lane usage
The minimum bail for improper use of lanes remains at $10 with the exception of driving on the wrong side of the street which has been raised from $5 to $10.

Minimum bail for racing has been raised from $25 to $100 under the new schedule.

The bail schedule for parking violations remains the same.

Judge Holmes has said he will take a "tougher attitude" toward recommending suspension of a driver's license or re-examination in cases of persons with "poor" driving records.

When the new bail schedule becomes effective the violations clerk in the Medford city hall will accept all bail.

A complete list of the new bail schedule will be posted in the violation clerks office in the city hall.
