Two Boys Hurt In Afternoon Crash Sunday

Two teen-age boys were injured in a one-car mishap Sunday afternoon on the Butte Falls rd. about 1 1/2 miles from Crater Lake highway, state police reported today.

Injured were Isaac Jerome Carroll, 16, route 1, box 426, Eagle Point, driver, who suffered a possible concussion, back and leg injuries, and a passenger, Michael Edward Hiday, 15, of 108 West Fifth st., Eagle Point, who received a deep cut on right side of his head. Both boys were reported in good condition this morning at Sacred Heart hospital where they were taken by Medford Ambulance Service yesterday.

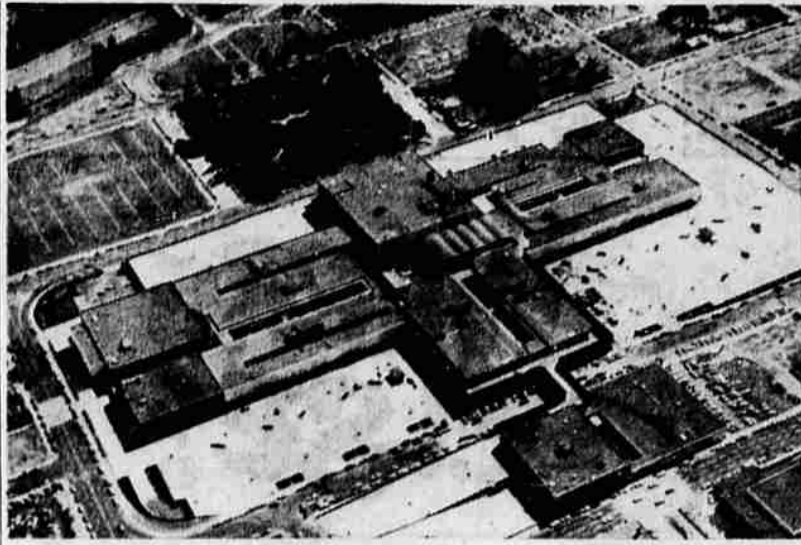

State police said the car hit a roadside ditch and bank after the driver lost control of the car. He was thrown out and the car crossed the center line after hitting the bank and traveled west on the shoulder and into the ditch.

A second accident occurred Sunday, state police reported, when a car went off the Green Springs highway between White Star and Pinehurst. State police are checking for the identity of the driver. Rogue Wrecker Service reported that Medford attorney Warren Lesseg had called them from Klamath Falls yesterday to pick up the car and tow it in.

When found by the state police the car was 150 feet off the highway hidden by a group of trees. Apparently the driver had tried to pull the car back onto the highway when one wheel dropped off the pavement. The car went off the highway and stopped against a group of trees on the left side of the highway, officers said.

Study Reviews Oregon's 1958 Primary Election

Eugene — External competition does not mean internal cohesion for political parties in primary contests, according to Lester G. Seligman, associate professor of political science and director of the University of Oregon.

Seligman reached this conclusion in a recently-completed study of the Oregon primary elections of May, 1958, for state legislative positions. The professor found there were few tendencies toward "state making" even in the most competitive districts. He noted that the most centralized recruitment of candidates by party organizations took place where the party was a distinct minority in its legislative district. This was the case in 1958 among Marion county Democrats and north Portland Republicans.

Conclusions of the political scientists were that: Candidacy is not an individualistic matter. It is a group enterprise apparently involving two steps — primary instigation and secondary support; secondary support for Republican candidates seems to come from interest groups while Democratic candidates get support from influential party people; parties are made up of small recruitment groups that follow independent courses and have separate goals and objectives.

Seligman considers the party to be a broad framework for use when politically convenient, which makes political cohesion extremely difficult. The virtue of this type of structure is that it is more open to political aspirants and more responsive to social changes that produce new candidates, he reports.

State's Industry Must Be Efficient, Researcher Says

Eugene — The answer to the effect of expanding world trade on the economy of Oregon lies in an analysis of Oregon's existing industry, writes Paul B. Simpson, professor of economics in the University of Oregon, who writes on "Some Probable Effects of Foreign Trade on the Economy of Oregon" in the June Oregon Business Review.

If, Simpson states, the 1957 exports and imports of the United States were to increase 10 per cent the proportionate share for Oregon would be mildly expansive. In other words, Oregon industries export more than they suffer from import competition. Oregon is not an export region in which a large portion of the state's products are shipped to foreign nations. On the other hand, Oregon's chief industries, agriculture and wood products, are not highly vulnerable to foreign competition.

The Oregon economist concludes that foreign trade will tend to have an expansive effect on the economy of the state, although it will certainly bear hard on some businesses.

Whether trade be foreign or domestic, Simpson writes, and whether the state expands or contracts in total population, the prosperity of the citizenry depends on its ability to do some jobs of production better than is done elsewhere. This would seem to call for emphasis on development of efficiency in its chief industries rather than go in for diversity of production or trade for its own sake.

Actor's Bust To Be on Display

Ashland — Opening night visitor to the Oregon Shakespearean Festival, Ashland, will view for the first time the portrait bust of actor Richard Graham as King Lear.

The cast stone bust is one of a series of three portraits by Ashland Sculptor Charles Forrester, and will be on exhibit throughout the season on the terrace at the rear of the theater.

Forrester, a graduate of the University of Washington, has recently completed his graduate work at the University of Oregon. While at Oregon, he modeled his most famous work, the equestrian statue at the west entrance to Springfield, Ore. In addition to his Lear statue, Forrester is working this summer on a series of four imaginative play sculptures which will be erected in one of Medford's parks.

The bust of Lear is modeled from photographs of Richard Graham, a Shakespearean actor who portrayed King Lear in 1951 and 1958. Graham was a member of the Acting Company for 11 years, and served for nine years on the Festival's Public Relations Staff.
