Firefighting Plane Crashes; Two Men Killed

By United Press International
The pilot and co-pilot were killed today when their B-25 firefighting plane crashed near La Grande in the Walla-Wallman National Forest. Their names were not immediately disclosed, pending notification of next of kin.
The plane was flying out of La Grande airport, and was one of several used to dump borate on more than 200 forest fires in Eastern Oregon and Southeastern Washington. The crash occurred between 8 and 9 a.m. when the plane had not yet dumped its load of borate. It was believed to have exploded when it hit the ground.
Helicopter at Scene
The U. S. Forest Service sent a helicopter to the scene of the crash, and said its investigation was continuing.

Fire Potential In Area Critical; Caution Is Asked

Forest fire potential is so critical in Jackson county that a holocaust could break out at any time, officials of the bureau of land management and the Rogue River National forest said today.
The Medford station of the U. S. weather bureau reported this is the 56th day without measurable rain. Forestry officials here are afraid possible lightning storms may cause the powder-dry woods to explode into flame. If the situation becomes more critical, the state forester may be asked to close the woods.
Both Ross Youngblood, BLM district manager, and Carroll Brown, Rogue River National forest supervisor, said fire-fighting equipment is being examined even more critically than before.
"All timber operators are required by state law to carry certain fire-fighting equipment, but we are even going beyond on minimum requirements," Youngblood said.
"We are going to hit every fire which comes with everything we have," Brown said. "We will have to call on Montague and Lakeview for borate planes since we sent our three to Walla Walla, Wash., to help fight fires in that critical area."
The Rogue River National forest recently sent 18 men to Walla Walla, and the local BLM district today sent four field foresters as supervisors of day and night fire patrols in the Lakeview area. They are Ernest Black, Bob Carroll, Tom Rossler and Jim Fuller. Meanwhile, local forestry officials have asked persons entering the woods to be careful with campfires. Brown said routine closures have been made for the area around Willow creek reservoir, Ashland watershed area and such timber operating areas as Steve's Fork in the Applegate section.
Recreationists may fish, water ski and use the official campground at resorts, but foresters are cutting down on unauthorized fires around the perimeter.
"Any fire which starts now has a big potential," Brown emphasized.

Medford Pilot George Milligan this morning flew a load of fire-fighting supplies to La Grande for use on the widespread forest and range fires now plaguing most of Central and Eastern Oregon.
The smoke from the many blazes, he said, made visibility in much of the area almost nil. The smoke can be seen plainly from as far west as Crater Lake, Milligan reported, and could be seen from a plane directly over Medford if it were high enough.
One of the difficulties encountered by firefighters is in bringing in and distributing sufficient food supplies to the crews on the fire lines, Milligan said.
The B-25 borate bomber which crashed near La Grande was not one of those from this area, he reported.
Southwest district of the state department of forestry last night sent two more men to assist with fire suppression in the northeast district. They are John Black, a forest warden, and Howard Brock, assistant district warden. They were dispatched to Ukiah, Victor Van Hoy and Wesley Stanfield previously were sent to the critical area.
The Interior Department called the situation in the West the worst outbreak of fires on public lands in three decades. And no relief was immediately in sight.
Additional men were sent in by plane and truck to help combat the flames that already had consumed thousands of acres of forest and grass lands.
About 120 fires were reported in Umatilla National Forest, and more than 100 in the Walla-Wallman National Forest, in northeastern Oregon and southeastern Washington. A blaze in the Snake river area has burned over 3,000 acres and was still reported out of control.

Education Interim Committee To Meet in Medford

The State Legislative Interim committee on education will hold a public hearing for interested groups and citizens when it meets in Medford Aug. 5 and 6, Representative Mrs. Evelyn Nye, Medford, chairman of the committee's subcommittee on quality of education, has announced.
The two-day meeting will be held at Hedrick Junior High school, and will include reports on various studies the committee has made.
Among reports will be one on the qualifications of teachers and administrative personnel in Oregon school districts, Mrs. Nye said. These studies are part of a comprehensive survey of Oregon education being conducted under the direction of Mrs. Nye's subcommittee.
The studies are being coordinated by the bureau of educational research of the University of Oregon under contract with the interim committee.
Other reports which will be made here include the results of studies of school district reorganization and the county school superintendent's office, Mrs. Nye said.
The full committee, of which Senator Ward H. Cook of Portland is chairman, will continue its discussion of whether the increasing cost of education should be financed from state aid or local property taxes.
A decision of the committee's recommendations to the next legislature on the distribution of state aid to local districts probably will be made, Mrs. Nye said.
Those wishing to appear and testify before the interim committee should contact Representative Nye.

Other members of the committee who are expected to attend are Senators Jean Lewis, Dwight Hopkins and Robert F. White; Representatives Nancy Kirkpatrick, Al Flegel, John Kerkow and Tom Monaghan; and William Bode, Stuart Compton, John Hounsell and James C. Yeomans.

South Koreans To Tour Water Systems

Three South Koreans will arrive in Medford tomorrow to spend four days touring the Rogue valley and inspecting the water supply systems in Medford and Ashland.
The visitors are I. J. Chung, water works engineer for the city of Seoul, Korea; B. C. Lee, water works engineer for the city of Chun Chon, Korea, and C. H. Park, ministry of home affairs, bureau of Korean public works.
Medford City Water Superintendent Robert Lee said the main purpose of the visit will be to inspect city water facilities. Lee said they have been in the U.S., and attending Oregon State college for the past several months under the auspices of the International Cooperation Administration.
Lee said arrangements have been made for the trio to attend a city employees picnic Saturday, spend Saturday night and part of Sunday at Crater lake, tour the Medford water supply system Monday, the Ashland water supply system Tuesday and attend the Oregon Shakespearean Festival Tuesday night.

Trappers Meet in Medford Tonight

Between 75 and 100 persons are expected to converge on Medford tonight as the initial activities of the Oregon Historical Society's fourth annual Trappers rendezvous begins.
Scheduled July 22 to 23, festivities begin at Hawthorne park with an ice cream social and an old time car show. Trappers will meet around a campfire at the park, according to Thomas Vaughan, director of the Society, Portland. Meeting here also are members of the Southern Oregon Historical Society, and the Siskiyou Pioneer Sites Foundation.
Other activities planned are a breakfast in Jacksonville served by the Eastern Star and a tour of the area by Jack Sutton of Grants Pass; a picnic at McKee bridge with guest Mayor John Snider, Medford; swimming and a trip to Southern Oregon college, Ashland.
At SOC, a dinner has been planned by Arthur Taylor, college faculty member, plus varied entertainment.
Trips to Klamath Falls and Crater lake have also been planned by groups of Trappers.

Steps in Creating Low-Cost Housing for Elderly Outlined

The first step in providing public-owned low-rent housing for senior citizens in Jackson county would be to reactivate the Jackson County Housing Authority.
Robert Campbell, executive director of the Lane County Housing Authority, made this suggestion during a meeting called by the Rogue Valley Council on Aging to discuss low cost housing at the Red Cross building Thursday afternoon.
Present at the meeting were approximately 25 persons including the entire county court, Medford Chamber of Commerce officials and welfare department representatives.
Campbell outlined the steps to be taken in providing public housing for senior citizens. He spoke with first-hand knowledge because the Lane County Housing Authority is now in the process of erecting 150 low-rent housing units in the city of Springfield.
He pointed out that the federal government will provide funds for studies to determine the need for low rent housing but these funds would be given only to a duly constituted authority, such as a county housing authority.
Contrary to popular opinion, the Jackson County Housing Authority has not really been abolished, he said, but merely inactivated. Once these housing authorities have been created they can never be abolished. All the county court would have to do would be to reappoint commission members to serve on the housing authority and it would be in business.
Authority Deactivated
(The Jackson county housing authority was created during WWII to administer wartime housing in Jackson county. It was deactivated some years ago when it turned over the last of its property and revenues to the city of Medford, which financed the Jackson park swimming pool.)
Once the housing authority is reactivated it should then apply to the Public Housing Authority of the federal government for funds to make a study to determine whether or not public housing is needed.
The study should be made by trained enumerators, hired by the authority. It should try and determine two things, he said, the age of people needing housing and their incomes.
If the study indicates that housing is needed for senior citizens the authority should then draw up a plan for the housing and apply for federal funds to finance it.
The Public Housing Authority will then conduct its own independent study to verify the need, he said.
Financing can take one of two courses, he said. One it can be borrowed from the federal government for 4.25 per cent interest or two, it can be borrow from private concerns for lower interest. The Lane County Housing authority chose this latter course, he said, and was able to obtain just a 2.19 per cent interest rate.

This low rate for private capital is possible, he said, because the federal housing authority will underwrite the bonds and ensure the investors that the housing authority will never default on them.
He emphasized the point that the federal government will continue to underwrite the bonds for as long as the housing authority uses the development for its originally intended purpose. That is, low rent housing for low income groups.

New Indictment Issued in Escrow Firm Case Here

The indictment against O. H. Bengston, Medford lawyer, and Rachel Peterson Carter, Jacksonville, in the Medford Escrow company case, has been dropped and new indictment issued, according to Deputy District Attorney Gerald Scannell.
The district attorney's office joined in the motion to dismiss the previous indictment and have the case resubmitted to the grand jury which was empaneled for the term beginning Monday, July 18.
"One of the grand jurors considering the matter had a pecuniary interest in Medford Escrow company, Inc., and while the state is morally certain there was no influence or bias, it would be in the interests of justice to dismiss the indictment," the deputy district attorney's motion read.
Return Indictment
The new grand jury returned an indictment against Bengston charging he took $3,701.14 illegally from the company funds on or about Oct. 21, 1951 and in another indictment charged he took $1,700 on or about Feb. 2, 1960. The grand jury also returned an indictment that Rachel Peterson Carter took $224.81 on or about May 14, 1958 from company funds.
Scannell said the grand jury has recessed and will be in session again Aug. 3 to further consider the case.

Sanitary Service Company To Start Land Fill Method

The City Sanitary Service company will soon start experimenting with the sanitary land fill method of garbage disposal, according to terms of a lease approved by the Medford city council last night.
Under the lease, the city agreed to rent some land just north of the existing White City garbage dump area to the City Sanitary Service for about four years.
The service agreed to pay the city $250 a year in rent, and to conduct the sanitary land fill method of garbage disposal on the property.
Sanitary land fill is a method of garbage disposal whereby the garbage is dumped into depressions in the ground, compacted with sand or similar material and covered daily. It involves no burning.
It involves no burning.
The service is still operating under a 10-year non-exclusive contract which has about four years left to run. The lease on the White City property will expire when the franchise does.
The company has apparently dropped its request for a 10-year exclusive garbage disposal franchise after Mayor John Snider vetoed a council ordinance to that effect last month.

Medford Council Approves Limousine Service Licenses to Two Firms; Debate Lasts Hour

The Medford city council approved airport limousine service licenses for two companies last night, during one of the most "heated" meetings the council has had for many months.
Last night's action should bring to an end the almost continuous limousine controversy that has involved the council since December.
Although Councilman Donald Hanson was true to his word in opposing the limousine license for the Yellow Cab company, the council approved it by a vote of 6-1.
A license for the Medford Airport Limousine Service was unanimously approved.
Long Debate
During debate on the matter which lasted for more than an hour, Ben Day, attorney for the Medford Airport Limousine Service, did his utmost to prevent council issuance of the Yellow Cab limousine license.
Day said that Councilman R. L. Van Sickle's remark at the previous meeting, when Hanson said he would vote to deny the Yellow Cab company a license to operate, that "I'm not going to vote to put any one out of business," would work to the opposite effect if Yellow Cab's application for a license is approved.
Day said: "Gentlemen, if you vote to issue more than one permit, you are doing just that, and doing it in the worst possible way... forcing him (Medford Airport Limousine Service) to die by inches."
Putting Them Back
There is only room for one limousine service at the airport, Day said, since there is not enough business for the two companies to profitably compete.
By rejecting Yellow Cab's application, the council would not be putting them out of business, he said, but "merely putting them back where they were when the decision was made to drive us out of business."
This was an obvious inference that Day and his clients feel the Yellow Cab company is trying to force them out of business.
Hanson was in complete accordance with Day's views, but he was the only one.
Hanson said the Medford Airport Limousine Service "saw an opportunity to render a new service (limousine) to the airport and have done the job and done it well."
About to Perish
Yellow Cab started operating its limousine at the airport following the issuance of a permit to the Medford Airport Limousine Service early last spring. Prior to that they had been serving the airport with cabs only.
Hanson said that because of the extensive competition at the airport, "one is about to perish."
Van Sickle said he respected

Security Council Tells Forces To Leave 'Speedily'

U.S., Russia Trade Warnings on Congo

United Nations, N.Y. — The Security Council unanimously called on Belgium today to withdraw its forces "speedily" from the Congo and then turned to its next cold war crisis involving the U.S. RB-47 shot down by Russia.

United Nations, N.Y. — Russia declared today that the United States has been "caught red-handed" in sending over Soviet territorial water an RB-47 reconnaissance plane shot down July 1 by Russian fighters.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vasily V. Kuznetsov said dispatch of the RB-47 was "an act of aggression, an act of force" for which the United States stood responsible.

The United States and Russia, who gave the debate ominous overtones by warning each other to stay out of the Congo, voted together with the other nine members of the council for a compromise resolution put forth by Tunisia and Ceylon.

Russia, insisting it was not "frightened" by the U.S. warning, declined to press a vote its own resolution which would have labeled Belgium an aggressor and given it a three-day time limit to withdraw from the Congo.

The council started its debate Thursday without waiting for Congolese Premier Patrice Lumumba, who had asked that it be delayed until he could get here. The vote came after midnight.

Premier Heads for N.Y.
Lumumba took off from Leopoldville for New York today in a plane furnished by Premier Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana. He planned a three-day layover at Accra to talk with Nkrumah. His arrival time in New York was not known.

U.N. Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold postponed his departure for Leopoldville, which has been scheduled for early Sunday. He now planned to take off Tuesday on an African trip that will carry him to Leopoldville and then to talks to Pretoria on South Africa's racial segregation policy.

The Tunisian-Ceylon resolution which won final approval called on the Belgian government to "implement speedily the Security Council resolution of July 14, on the withdrawal of their troops and authorizes the secretary general to take all necessary action to this effect."

Before the vote, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vasily V. Kuznetsov replied to Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge's warning of Wednesday that the United States would "do everything that may be necessary" to keep Soviet troops out of the Congo.

"If he expects to frighten us, he is vastly mistaken," Kuznetsov said. "The Soviet Union will answer all requests to provide assistance to peoples struggling for liberation."

This drew from Lodge a retort that his original statement "stands and Mr. Kuznetsov might as well realize it."

Thomas Kansa, the Congo's 31-year-old Delegate-Designate to the United Nations and one of the few college graduates in his country, thanked the council for its vote.

Council Approves Playground Items

An agreement for sculpture-type play-apparatus to be erected in Medford city parks was unanimously approved by the city council last night.
After approval was given, however, Councilman R. L. Van Sickle criticized the city parks and recreation commission for "obligating" itself on the matter without authorization by the council.

The agreement is between the city and Charles H. Forrester, Ashland, a former faculty member of the University of Oregon school of art.
Under terms of the agreement, Forrester would erect four pieces of modernistic play apparatus in Hawthorne park at a total cost of $1,750.
Models on Display
Models of the apparatus to be built were on display at the meeting last night. They include a set of three horse-like structures, a "sand pool" and a turtle.

It was pointed out that the apparatus is being erected at no cost to the city. The money to finance the structures comes from donations to the parks department by the T. W. Miles Estate, the Moose lodge, Medford Kiwanis club and Medford Elks club.
Parks and Recreation Director Robert Hancourt pointed out to the council that the play apparatus would cost the city about $6,000 if it were purchased from companies that manufacture it.
Forrester, whose studio is in Ashland, has agreed to design and construct the apparatus at cost. Target date for completion of the project is Sept. 30.

After the vote was taken, Councilman Van Sickle said, "I would like to caution the park committee not to commit themselves in the future... it might be found in an embarrassing position."
This was the first time that council action was taken on the matter. The parks and recreation commission has been negotiating with Forrester for several months on the project, and Forrester has started actual construction on a couple of the items.
Van Sickle added, "I could see them (commission) obligating themselves on a project and the council not agreeing, and they'd be way out in left field."
Hancourt pointed out that the council had once before elected to send a note of thanks to donors of the money for the play apparatus.
Councilman Ed Hall said he would like to see the play apparatus painted when it is completed to make it as "smooth as possible." He said he wanted to make sure that the apparatus would not cause the same problem as the Jackson park swimming pool.
He was referring to the skinned and cut feet that children have been getting while swimming in the pool.

SOMEBODY PUSH — The merry-go-round and other play equipment at Hawthorne park is seldom idle these days, as members of the younger set find an outlet for their boundless energy. Mother, meanwhile, can probably be found in the shade of a nearby tree. The park, constructed right after World War II, is now in its prime, offering cool respite from the summer's heat. Some of the youngsters in the picture above were probably waiting for their big brother or sister to finish their swimming "exam" held this morning at Hawthorne park.
