Market in Doldrums; No One Knows Where It's Going

By ELMER C. WALZER
UPI Financial Editor

New York—(UPI)—The stock market is above its lows for the year, below its highs, the dulllest for a month and a half, and no one wants to guess where it is going.

It's in the summer doldrums and approaching a period where a summer rally has taken hold in nearly every year in market history.

But it has many worries which read like alliterative recitation—Khrushchev, Kennedy, Cuba, and Congo.

Actually the foregoing are seen as mere excuses. The real reasons for lethargy and declining prices is seen as an erosion of the economy which has made itself felt strongly in steel mill operations.

Reduced steel production has held down car loadings. But other major lines have done fairly well. Home building has slipped but this phase of construction has been offset by strength in other departments, notably additions to manufacturing plants and rehabilitation of existing facilities.

Automobile production has held high and soon new models will be rolling off the assembly lines.

Altogether the industrial level has been only a small distance below the record high. And gross national product and national income have achieved new all-time highs.

The situation is seen as one of those things that cannot be pinpointed. No one knows what the trading element is going to do. And the market is swayed back and forth by the collective opinion of all those who trade in it.

So far this year the market graph has presented a sawtooth appearance—a new high record for industrials on Jan. 5—a 62.85 point decline to Jan. 29; a 14.30 rise to Feb. 2; a 25.59 point drop to Feb. 16; a 20.67 rise to Feb. 26; a 32.90 decline to March 8, the year's low; a 31.67 point rise to April 18; a 31.16 point decline to May 2; a 56.81 point rise to June 9, a 30.42 point drop to July 18—Tuesday.

Wall Street experts believe the market has about all the bad news it can conjure up behind it. The future, they assert, should be much better. Now is improving. Steel

Firm's Advertising Got Quick Results

Jackson, Miss.—An automobile agency here contends that its prices are so low that buying is almost like stealing. The firm advertised, "Come in and steal our cars." The night the ad appeared, somebody broke into the showroom and drove off with a new model.

Washington—(UPI)—The interior department reports that fires this year on public lands in the Western states have been the worst in 30 years—and no relief is in sight.
