Nomination Speech To Be Hatfield's Most Important

Salem (UPI)—Oregon's handsome Gov. Mark Hatfield scribbled away Thursday at the most important speech of his career—to nominate Vice President Richard Nixon for the Republican presidency—and said it would be a brief one.

Digging in a history book, he said that Norman Judd nominated Abe Lincoln a century ago, also in Chicago, with only 26 words. The second speech of an Ohio delegate named Oglesby consisted of one sentence describing Lincoln as a man "who can split rails and maul Democrats."

"Two hundred sixty would be more like it," Hatfield said.

The governor has introduced Nixon five times in the past two years, each time in Oregon, and each time the introduction did not run more than two minutes.

Although not a spell-binder Hatfield speaks with vigor. He once was characterized as a Southern Baptist minister in an Ivy League suit.

Aside from his new convention role, he missed his most important speaking opportunity last March when he cancelled a speech before the annual Gridiron Club dinner in Washington, D. C. following the death of Sen. Richard L. Neuberger (D-Ore.).

Committee Okays Increase in Hatfield's Staff

Salem (UPI)—Increasing the governor's staff to meet a mushrooming workload was endorsed by the governor's advisory committee on government reorganization.

State Finance Director Freeman Holmer said the chief executive should have at least four more special assistants and at least two more secretaries.

The assistants would be assigned to oversee for the governor operations in four areas: 1. Education and social services; 2. Natural resources; 3. Labor, commerce and industry; and 4. Transportation and public safety.

The committee held up final determination as to how much more of a staff the governor should have pending their overall decisions on reorganization of Oregon's government.

Headed by former Gov. Charles Sprague of Salem, the committee set Sept. 8 for its final meeting.

Jackson Fourth In Retail Sales

Jackson county ranks fourth in retail sales volume in the state, according to information from the Portland field office, U. S. Department of Commerce.

The information was based on the 1958 census of retail trade in Oregon. The Medford Chamber of Commerce is a cooperative office of the U. S. department, maintaining files and information on economic trends for public use.

Medford and Jackson county have enjoyed a rather stable growth in retail volume. Chamber Manager Don McNeil said.

The 1954 business census on retailing indicates a total volume of $75,443,000, compared with the 1958 retail volume of $86,172,000. This represents an increase during the four-year period of 14.2 per cent.

Oregon's growth in retailing has been 11.2 per cent for the same period, the local manager added. During the last four years, Jackson county maintained fourth place in total retail dollar volume among Oregon counties.

A pamphlet showing the 1958 report with complete breakdowns on individual sales quotas may be obtained through the local chamber of commerce, McNeil said.

Leisure Time Planning Stressed by Official

Need of planning leisure time activities for the total community rather than just a special program for the old age group was brought out by Miss Julia Johnson Wednesday at the noon luncheon of Medford Kiwanis club.

Miss Johnson, executive secretary of the Oregon State Council on Aging, said, "Our council feels that no one wants to be segregated and set back in a corner because of age."

The council official mentioned the reluctance of people—men, as well as women—even to thing about aging. "Something should be done, she said, to try to erase this reluctance."

The secretary stressed the need of leisure time activities since older people can have

Minor Injuries Reported at Firm

Several minor injuries have been reported at the Rogue Valley Bounce-O-Rue.

Last week one boy was hospitalized after an old knee injury gave way and another suffered a cut on his head.

Bounce-O-Rue Manager Ray Jinks said that these injuries have not been due to faulty equipment or other negligence, but to inexperience and lack of physical fitness. This is evidenced by the reports of strained muscles, he said.

He warned that there is a certain amount of risk in any strenuous sport, and that participants should realize this.
