

Mr. and Mrs. Larry Marsh Maurer (Wilson photo)

Marriage Of Interest In Medford

A wedding of interest here was held July 2 in Oakland, Ore., when Miss Phyllis Rae Fasel became the bride of Larry Marsh Maurer in a double ring ceremony held at the Presbyterian church. The Rev. Richard Wayne officiated at the 11 o'clock morning rites.

The bride is a daughter of Mrs. Deloris Fasel, Oakland, and W. T. Fasel, Medford, Mr. Maurer is a son of Mr. and Mrs. L. N. Maurer, Cave Junction.

Baskets of white stock and pink carnations decorated the church for the ceremony attended by families of the couple. Miss Doreen Eggleton played the piano wedding music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a ballerina length frock of white cotton lace with matching jacket. It was accented with satin. Her shoulder length veil was held by a pearl trimmed band and she carried a bouquet of pink roses, white carnations, lily of the valley and loveknots from Switzerland.

Mrs. Dean Walsh, Ashland, attended the bride. She wore a pink cotton sheath dress with pink accessories. Her bouquet was of pink carnations and white streamers of lily of the valley.

Louis Maurer Jr., Ashland, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the church. White bells and sweet peas decorated the rooms.

The couple traveled to the coast on their wedding trip, the bride wearing for traveling a pink cotton sheath with white jacket. Her corsage was of pink roses.

The bride attended Oakland High school and Southern Oregon college. Mr. Maurer attended Illinois Valley High school and Southern Oregon college. He is employed by the Illinois Valley Recreation board as recreation director. This fall he will be high school teacher and coach at Philomath, Ore.

Colorful Season Ahead; Red and Purple Popular

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor

New York - (UPI) - Women will see red and a multitude of other hues including purple - when we do our wardrobe shopping this fall.

Women's fashions are headed for such a colorful season that the basic little black dress will look drab as a wren beside the peacock.

My notebooks on the fall collections displayed for visiting fashion reporters are full of color listings - red ranging from fire engine to ruby and deep raspberry; every shade of purple from palest violet through grape, eggplant, plum and amethyst; the whole green spectrum from apple and bronzed green to olive, jade, spruce and emerald.

A Hothouse Look
Dusty and azalea pinks, bieges, off-whites, and tangerine give a hothouse look to winter clothes, both daytime woollens and nighttime silks.

Many fabrics in turn take on a sooty look because black was added during the dyeing process. Browns, grays, blues and greens all get a "blackened" look.

Watch in the brown family also for taupe, chutney, burnt-ished topaz, and champagne. The manufacturer Herbert Sondheim, one member of the Couture group showing fall collections, coined his own names for colors - tostado brown, green olive, sparkling burgundy, tango red, peach melba and midas gold.

Sondheim said, "the news for fall is not so much what we do, as how we do it." He showed numerous full skirts, one of them dubbed the "fan flair." This skirt was a straight fit two-thirds of the way down, then flared in soft pleats or flounces. Worn with it: the "hinden persuader," a petticoat cut the same as the outer garment with fullness at the hem.

Highlights of other collections:

Harvey Berin - designer Karen Stark continued to feature the sleek, simple daytime wool dresses, with the waistline left in most cases at the normal level. Costume jackets were fur-trimmed. And for dressy occasions, she used a "bridging the gap" technique to show bareness. The dresses were sleeveless, cut high in front, low at the back, and the two parts joined with neat bows at each shoulder.

Branel - everything for day wear was drenched in color - lacquer red, petunia pink, and fuchsia. Otherwise the collection leaned to the conservative, pretty and becoming clothes. The firm showed a group of leisure wear also - one outfit, a lounge suit of black broadtail, for the vest and tapered trousers, with white satin blouse. There were several one-piece coveralls in velvet.

B. H. Wraga - this firm who doesn't buy for a season but to build a wardrobe for several seasons, featured several outfits with a lowered waistline. A Wraga classic, the simply cut jersey dress with string belt, this season came with an apron panel, non-ruffled. One overcoat was sleeveless, done sack style in a beige and drab green check wool, worn over a solid beige dress, with long sleeves.

Creamy Tones
Hannah Troy - Mrs. Troy liked color, but on the quiet side, with misty, creamy tones. Fur trims, on collar, cuff, or as lining, were on many of the neat, daytime ensembles.

Arthur Jablow - designer David Kidd used the bias cut freely - bias cut skirts, bias coat fronts, bands, yokes and hiplines. In turn, box pleated skirts helped along the look of mobility to the clothes. The designer also showed the princess silhouette and called it the "Armstrong-Jones" after the British Princess whose wedding gown followed this classic high-bosomed look.

Ben Gershel - the costume theme ran throughout the collection designed by Robert Knox. Most suits came with overblouses, usually done in wool jersey or cashmere.

Some costumes were two-piece dresses with coordinated coat. Colors included shocking pink, shown in a cashmere coat with Peter Pan collar, and turquoise, used for an overblouse worn with a brown and turquoise plaid coat and skirt.
