

Rogue Basin Study Expected To Be Completed by Sept. 1961

The Corps of Engineers plans to complete the much-delayed Rogue River Basin study by September, 1961, Henry Stewart, representing the engineers, told the Medford Chamber of Commerce luncheon Monday.

Stewart and Travis S. Roberts of the U.S. fish and wildlife service, outlined the progress being made in the study and went over some of the problems that have been encountered.

Stewart said the tentative schedule now calls for a public hearing to be held on the report in the summer of 1961. Following the hearing a report will be sent to Congress, which will take the responsibility for further action, he said.

Stewart said the study was delayed from its original completion date of November, 1959, because of the need for further information on water temperatures and how a system of dams in the basin would affect these temperatures. Temperature information is important, he said, because of its effect on fish.

Roberts pointed out that the Corps is completing the study to determine the need for a dam, but that "I am convinced that the dam will pay for itself many times in a sound program for the Rogue River basin."

The benefits to be derived from the project, when completed, will be considerable, according to Stewart. He said it will result in annual benefits of $432,000 a year in flood control; $11,800,000 in power; $300,000 in recreation; and $240,000 in fishing. These figures are estimates, he said, and may need revising.

Although a Rogue basin study was authorized in 1936, nothing much was done until 1953. In the year floods caused more than $4 million in damages in the basin, he said. "The impact of those floods renewed and strengthened interest in flood control and led to appropriation of funds in the fiscal year 1957 to continue work on the Rogue report."

Give Consideration
The Corps was directed to give consideration to "all practical means" of providing flood control. In addition it was to consider the needs of irrigation, fishery and recreational resources and hydroelectric power.

A prime consideration, in addition to the need for flood control, is the need for "feasible means" of minimizing damage to the fishery resource, while at the same time providing a maximum of flood control and serving irrigation and other purposes."

Federal law at that time, Stewart noted, provided only for restitution of damages to fish and wildlife resources and no consideration was given to improving conditions specifically to enhance fishing.

Preliminary Studies
Preliminary studies in 1959 resulted in a plan of four dams and reservoirs to be located at Last creek, Elk creek, Meadows and Copper. While these studies were going on, Stewart said, Congress in 1958 enacted a law permitting project design to improve and enhance fish and wildlife resources.

After a series of hearings were held throughout the basin and the fears of sports fishermen interests were made known, the effects of the dams on fish were studied.

It was found that the Copper reservoir project would have been "highly beneficial" to the fishery resource, but the Last creek dam would have been "highly detrimental."

Raise Temperature
A study of the proposed Lost creek dam indicated that the reservoir water when released into the river would raise the temperature during the summer months by as much as 10 degrees. During the same summer, Stewart said, the Rogue had already attained a temperature of 80 degrees. He noted that such temperatures "are highly damaging to fish" of the Rogue river.

Under these conditions, he said, "it is necessary to study the effect of the dam on the river and to determine the need for a dam, but that 'I am convinced that the dam will pay for itself many times in a sound program for the Rogue River basin.'"

Both Ben Hixon, chairman of the Rogue Basin Flood Control and Water Resources Board, and George Field, representative on the board on the Chamber of Commerce, urged the launch of the study.

Hixon said the study is the beginning of the process of a liaison between the federal government and the local community. He said the study is a cooperative effort of the many agencies which are working on the project to straighten out the cooperation.

Stewart said the Corps is waiting to see what happens in the adjourned session of Congress and as soon as it gets the money it will get back to work.

College Offers Three Classes in Post Season Event

Ashland - During the post session at Southern Oregon college, Aug. 15 to 26, the class offerings will be social science in the elementary school and language arts in the elementary school, both will be instructed by Mrs. Mary Helen Gwinn, of the Lincoln staff.

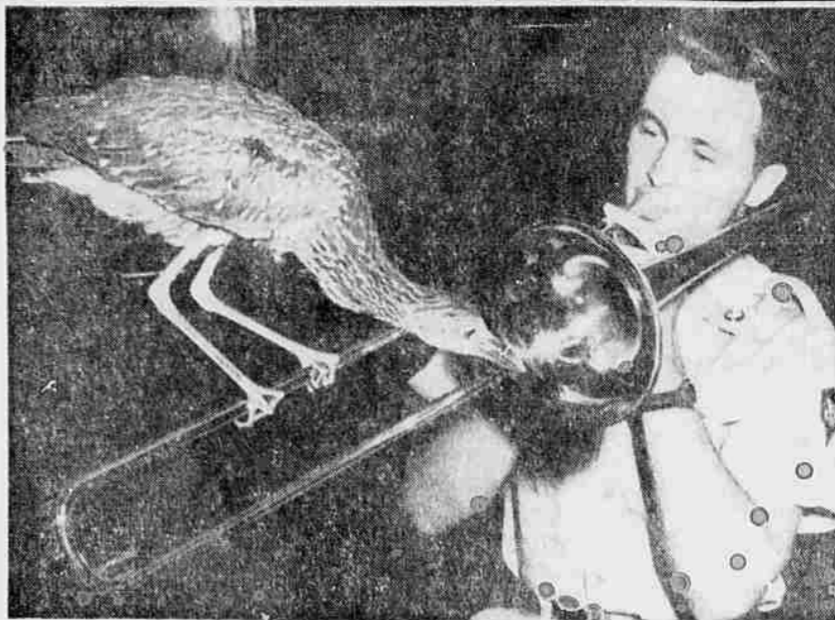

Spanish in the elementary school will be conducted by Dennis G. Gorman, former head of the SOC language department.

Seminars taught by Mrs. Gwinn will deal with the problems and methods in selecting and organizing materials for teaching either social science or language arts in the elementary school. The social science course will place emphasis on techniques teachers must use to implement the unit method of teaching and ways in which the teacher can secure a better understanding of the concepts being presented.

In the language workshop, opportunities will be given for special work in the teaching of English, writing, speaking, and spelling.

Hannan's course, Spanish in the elementary school, requires no previous knowledge of Spanish but graduate credit is available with the consent of the instructor for students with some knowledge of Spanish. The enrollees will acquire basic instruction in pronunciation and practical classroom expressions. The audio-oral approach will be emphasized for teaching Spanish in the grade schools as well as the problem and methods in selecting such materials.

All three courses offer three quarter hours of undergraduate or graduate credit. Additional information may be obtained from Dr. Bill Simpson, director of summer session at SOC.

HERON GIVES INSTRUCTIONS - "A" heron, "Down-Wing" has lined the band right, now, let's take it from the top again. That last note was just a little bit sour. This appears to be the instruction given last night by George M. Mutch, F. Hood, Tex., trombonist. The instructor is "Down-Wing."

High School Sign Removed Yesterday

The Black Tornado sign, formerly located at the corner of the Medford High school playing field, was removed yesterday.

J. R. Acheson, assistant school superintendent, said that it would be installed on the side of the baseball grandstand.

The sign, which stood on three inch metal pipes, was bent almost 35 degrees in a recent storm.

Acheson said that it was considered too difficult to straighten the poles and plant the sign in its former position.

Comedian Claims Pie-Tossing Record

London - Comedian Buster Keaton said Monday nobody can tell him anything about tossing custard pies.

"I once threw a pie 27 feet and hit the guy back in the puss," he said. "That's the world's longest custard pie throw, as far as I know."

HE RE-GREW HAIR

Charles Erickson, 45 years old, had a bad hair problem. He had lost all his hair and was balding. He had tried many treatments but nothing worked. He then came to the Erickson Hair and Scalp Specialists and after a few treatments, his hair began to grow back. He is now completely bald-free and his hair is growing back.

Hair Specialists Here Tomorrow Will Show How to Save Hair and Prevent Baldness

For about seven years Erickson Hair and Scalp Specialists has demonstrated to thousands of hair worried men and women over 100,000,000 throughout the United States. The Erickson organization has become the world's largest home treatment system. It is founded on the principle that certain cases of thinning hair and spots of baldness can be cured by an inexpensive new method of scalp treatments. Dr. D. W. Erickson, President, admits very frankly that most people who come in for their free examination do so with an attitude of complete skepticism. "This is a natural reaction," says Mr. Erickson, "because the average person has heard time and time again that a thinning head of hair will lead to eventual baldness and nothing can be done to stem the tide. We're not medical men, but we're not quacks either. We're not medical men, but we're not quacks either. We're not medical men, but we're not quacks either."

Sen. Morse Raps Sugar Quota Bill

Ontario, Ore. - Sen. Wayne L. Morse (D-Ore.) said Monday the sugar bill passed in the closing hours of the recent session of Congress, authorizing a cut in Cuba's quota, "did great injustice to the sugar producers of the United States."

Morse discussed the bill while in this sugar beet district for an inspection of the Bull Creek reclamation project. He will continue his tour of Oregon projects Tuesday, meeting at the Dalles with orchardists in connection with the West Irrigation project there.

He didn't dispute the need of a cut in the Cuban sugar quota, but said the new act denied to American producers the increase in which they are clearly entitled. He said it also denied increased quotas to some of our best friends in Latin America.

Parting To Speak At Local Meeting

Cal Parner, assistant organization director of the National League of Senior Citizens, will speak Wednesday, Aug. 10, at 7:30 p.m. at the Girls Community club, 229 North Bartlett st., Medford.

Parner will describe the efforts being made to obtain increases in federal funds for state old age pensions and so-called security payments.

The League advocates federal social security payments of $173 per month, prepaid medical care, and federal aid to provide adequate, low-rent housing for the elderly.

Burglar Puts Blame On 'Idle Hands'

Sanford, N.C. - Hollis Van Dowdy Jr. was sentenced to five years in jail Monday on nine charges of breaking and entering.

Asked to explain his activities by Judge Hamilton Hobgood, Dowdy merely replied, "Idle hands are the devil's workshop."

Wall Street Chatter

Recent firming technique in import curbs and production restraints, the petroleum industry appears to be mulling a plan to cutting down on excessive inventories, according to the United States Bureau of Economic Analysis.

Through recent product curbs still above the industry's goal, U.S. motor oil production is expected to be about 10 percent below a year ago. "As a result of this curbing, the industry is expected to be in a position to meet the demand for oil in the near future."

Madfield Pressured In Wage Campaign

Madfield - Pressure is on Gov. Mark Hatfield to withdraw his support for the Republican candidates, including the Nixon-Lodge ticket, but it will probably be Sept. 1 before a decision is made as to how much support he will give.

Madfield, who picked up political prestige at the GOP National convention last week, has been added by National Republican officials to do all he can for the national ticket.

Press Secretary Travis Cross said Monday that some of Hatfield's appearances will be in other states, but schedules have not been firming up. He added the governor was 17 speaking invitations in California alone, a few of them political, but he had not accepted any of them.

August Bloody Month in Oregon

Salem - The Oregon Traffic Safety division reported Monday that August is traditionally a bloody month for travel on Oregon highways.

In August of last year 62 persons died in traffic crashes, the worst month in Oregon traffic history.

Summer deaths this year are whittling down a reduction in state traffic fatalities earlier this year.

Causes of fatalities in August, 1959, were like a list of "what not to do," the division said. The incidence of attention traffic, falling asleep at the wheel, driving too fast, passing with insufficient clearance and driving while drinking.

Portland Bank Robber Sought By FBI, Police

Portland - The FBI and local authorities stepped up their search today for a lone gunman who held up the Hillsdale branch of the Multnomah bank early Monday and escaped with some $43,000 in cash and $3,000 in non-negotiable series E bonds.

The bank's vice president, W. L. Rutherford, told police that the soft-spoken gunman, dressed in a grey business suit, got away with most of the cash contents of a vault and a safe.

Police said entry to the bank was gained by smashing a plate glass window at the rear. The officers took a large rock, presumably used to break the window, to headquarters for laboratory analysis.

The robber, police were told, confronted Mrs. Phyllis Rugh, bookkeeper at the bank. When she came to work at 1:15 p.m. When he found she could not open the safe, he taped her wrists, and put her in a room. Second person to arrive at the bank was L. Mohr, branch manager, and the gunman confronted her, demanding that she open the safe.

Just as Mrs. Mohr was opening the safe, Mollie Clark reported for work. The gunman held up three women at gunpoint while he finished pocketing the money. Then he proceeded on foot east and disappeared. Police said he may have used a grey and white station wagon on the getaway car.
