

ROOF MAKES POOR BED—Alton Byrd, 7, of Dallas, Tex., stares down at his mother after she found him sleeping on the roof. Alton stayed out too late at night and feared a spanking so he decided to spend the night on the roof. His parents spent half of the night looking for him and finally called police. Alton said "it wasn't any fun" and that he liked his bed better.

Japanese Students Discuss Conflict, Discrimination

Ashland — An exchange of Japanese greetings and a song presented by Hugh Simpson, Southern Oregon college director of information, set a friendly atmosphere for the panel of Japanese students from Keio university, Tokyo, Japan, this week in the Churchill auditorium.

The students, members of the Keio-Stanford summer exchange program introduced by Eichi Ishii, a junior in economics and chairman of the group, were Tadami Takano, a senior and a political science major; Misses Kayoko Kurita, Akiko Takahashi, and Yoriko Tanaka, juniors in English literature.

Due to a heavy schedule and lack of sleep, Satoru Mori, a political science major, and Bill Kishimoto, an architect major touring as a guest of the Japanese students, were unable to attend the panel.

Question presented to the panel received immediate, sometimes amusing answers. For example, in discussing words that are common to many languages, Ishii remarked that such Japanese words as "chewing gum" and "chocolate" are also found in English!

Turning to more serious matters, the conflict between pre-war and post-war generation and the effect of racial discrimination on America's foreign relations were discussed among other topics.

The conflict of pre-war and post-war generations, said the three young women, was caused by the difference between the feudalistic education of the older generation and the more liberal upbringing of the younger. These younger people have known a greater degree of freedom and a wider range of experience than their parents, yet they feel restricted in discussing their problems with their elders.

However, they feel, and hope, that a compromise can be attained.

Discuss Segregation
In discussing the segregation problem in this country, Takano said that he, personally, has not yet really encountered any serious discrimination and added that in Japan people do not feel any discrimination of race. The chairman of the group felt that if equal education would be given to the Negro and the White, the problem of discrimination probably could be solved.

They all agreed that the impressions received of the United States had lived up to their expectations and one member of the group was especially impressed with the vast network of highways in the nation.

The students appreciate the cordial welcome that they have received from the residents of Ashland and the nearby areas where they have visited. It is their hope to promote mutual understanding between this country and Japan.

Tentative Power Allocations Told

Portland — (UPI) — Bonneville Dam Power Administrator William A. Pearl has announced tentative allocations for sale of 375,000 kilowatts of power.

Pearl said the power would provide for establishment of two new electroprocess industries in the Pacific Northwest, as well as plant additions for two existing industries.

Pearl said the tentative power allocations were awarded to:

United Pacific Aluminum Corporation, for construction of two aluminum potlines at a site near Longview, Wash.

Webb & Knapp Company, Inc., for construction of a steel mill at Anaconda, Mont.

Harvey Aluminum, Inc., for construction of two additional potlines at a location not yet determined.

Crown-Zellerbach Corp., for modification of pulp processing at the Port Townsend, Wash., plant.

Child's Lunch Mixture Kills 3

Dania, Fla. — (UPI) — Ernest Nuby Jr., 12, was left in charge of getting lunch for his six younger brothers and sisters Thursday.

He mixed a paste of guava fruit, pancake mix, onions and various spices. He climbed on a chair to reach a brown paper bag in a high shelf, and mixed in powder from the bag.

He fed the concoction to five of the youngsters. Three of them, Dorothy May 4, Marilyn Junita, 9, and Charles Nuby, 11, died. A physician saved the life of Alan, 6, and Sharon, 11.

The powder in the bag was roach poison. It contained deadly parathion, which was developed as a poison gas during World War II.

Assistant County Medical Examiner R. K. Haugen called the deaths accidental.
