Legal Status of Psychology New

Bonn, Germany – (Science Service) – From the point of view of legal status the profession of psychology in the United States is relatively new, Dr. John G. Darley, executive secretary of the American Psychological association, told colleagues at the Sixteenth International Congress for Psychology, now being held here.

"The first law affecting psychology," he said, "was passed in Connecticut in 1945."

In the early years of psychology in the U.S. by far the greater number of those called psychologists were employed in universities and colleges. Today, however, about half are found in industry, in Federal, state and local governmental agencies and in school systems, with a small fraction in private practice.

'K' Misunderstood West Germans Told

Moscow – (UPI) – Premier Nikita Khrushchev said Thursday the Soviet Union was ready to disband its armed forces "at any moment."

Khrushchev's reply to a West German peace group was published by the Soviet Tass news agency, which said, "Khrushchev points out that so far, all our efforts to achieve disarmament have not met with the proper understanding on the part of the Western leaders."
