Three queens at Anne's christening: Mary, Elizabeth, and the Queen Mother.

Princess Anne

ON MONDAY, AUG. 15, a girl with the resounding name of Anne Elizabeth Alice Louise Windsor-Mountbatten celebrates her 10th birthday. The first decade can be an eventful one for a little girl, especially if she is a Princess of Great Britain, daughter of Queen Elizabeth II, and apple of the collective eye of 50 million Britons.

As in the past, Princess Anne will probably celebrate her big day with her mother, father, and brothers (including her new brother, Prince Andrew), at the family castle in Scotland. There may be a birthday party for a few young friends, all carefully guarded from outsiders.

Yet the public will watch their charming princess with more eagerness than ever. Queen Elizabeth, anxious to guard her children's privacy, tried to keep them from public exhibition, and most glimpses of them came through windows of limousines and trains, or at sporting events. But this year Princess Anne has appeared in public more than ever, as bridesmaid in two big weddings: those of her cousin, Lady Pamela Mountbatten, and her favorite aunt, Princess Margaret.

Next year may be even more momentous for Princess Anne. In the fall she will go to a private girl's school, the first time a British princess has departed from the tradition of governesses and tutors to mingle with nonroyal children.

To celebrate Anne's birthday, FAMILY WEEKLY presents an album showing the pretty princess through the years and showing, too, the striking resemblance she bears to her mother when she was a young princess.

Anne holds her new brother, Prince Andrew, born this year.

At two, Anne looked quite serious.

In looks and gesture, Anne resembles her mother (below).

THINK ABOUT DEATH and START TO LIVE!

It is human nature to put off thoughts of death as long as we can.

This is especially true when our years are young, our health is good, and we're having a wonderful time.

But even in this life, the true values and real joys of living come into clear focus only when we face up to the facts of death and ask ourselves: "What does it mean?"

Once we do this, the terrifying specter of death becomes less fearsome. We see it as a teacher, cautioning us to shape our lives in a manner pleasing to God. We see it not as a Grim Reaper, robbing us of our worldly pleasures, but as the golden gateway to God's greatest of all gifts—eternal life.

There are some people, of course, who believe that after this life there is no more. The pure and the sinful, they contend, all meet the same gloomy end of eternal nothingness; there is no judgment, no punishment, no reward. But if our reason did not tell us this is wrong, we have the clearer assurance of God Himself that man shall live on earth, shall eventually meet death, that he shall be judged and, upon that judgment, shall live eternally either in joy—or misery.

This has been the teaching of the age-old Catholic Church since the time of the Apostles. It is a doctrine that compels a Catholic to think of his life in terms of his death. It sounds like a gloomy doctrine to those who dislike to face up to the facts of death and the certainty of divine judgment, but Catholics are inspired rather than depressed by it.

However gloomy the prospect of death may be, Catholics are constantly reminded by the Church of the importance of facing up to it instead of trying to ignore it. In the month of November each year, the thoughts of the faithful are especially directed to the special considerations of that occasion when every human being must take off on that final "flight" to God's vast unknown.

If you would like to know how to think about death, what happens after death, how to think about heaven, how the Church helps its people at death, what's the right attitude toward death as Catholics see it, write today for our free pamphlet. It will be sent in a plain wrapper... nobody will call on you. Ask for Pamphlet No. FM-53.
