Program of Chamber Music Given at Festival Theater

A concert of chamber music Sunday afternoon in the Oregon Shakespearean festival theater provided a refreshing interlude for the small audience which attended. The concert is one of a series of music and dance concerts given Sunday afternoons of each festival season.

Stanley Plummer, harpsichordist and instructor of organ at Whitman college, Walla Walla, Wash., and Richard D. Werner, Medford violinist, were the soloists. Other musicians on the program were Bernard T. Windt, cellist and director of music for the Shakespearean festival, Miss Lynn Sohler, bass violinist, and Miss Sabine Phelps of the festival music company.

Introducing his three brief solo numbers, Mr. Plummer reminded his audience that Shakespeare was well acquainted with the harpsichord and that music is woven into many of his plays. One of Mr. Plummer's selections, "Carmen's Whistle," is mentioned in one of the plays. Mr. Plummer also played a Pavone and a Rondo which he said "was the jazz of Shakespeare's time."

Mr. Plummer is a master on the harpsichord, an instrument with a delicate, fragile tone and a limited color effect. In spite of the fact that an amplifier was used yesterday, some of the audience had difficulty in hearing in the open air theater.

When combined with the other instruments, some of the passages were very lovely indeed; at other times, the weight of the cello and violin tended to obscure the harpsichord.

Mr. Werner, an accomplished musician whose talents as violinist and teacher, orchestra director and composer have great influence in the valley, was featured in two selections with Mr. Plummer. Mr. Werner had chosen an adagio movement from a sonata by Jean Baptiste Senaille, and played the whole of Tartini's "Sonata in G minor." These were well received.

Mr. Werner, Mr. Windt and Miss Sohler were heard in a number composed by Michael Haydn, a brother of the famous Joseph Haydn. Mr. Windt explained that while Michael Haydn had composed much music, he refused to have it published and little remains today.

The audience particularly enjoyed the closing number in which Miss Phelps sang "Batti, Batti, O Bell Masetto" from Mozart's "Don Giovanni."

Old Folks Need Better Furniture

By JOYCE SCHULLER
United Press International
Chicago - (UPI) - Home furnishings for older folks should be more comfortable than the conventional rocking chair.

Robert Greengoss, president of a company (Morton Textiles and Furniture of Chicago) which furnishes nursing homes for the elderly, said the deep recesses of the rocking chair for ultra-modern butterfly chair are backbreakers for older persons.

"They're difficult to get in and out of," he said. Older persons also have trouble getting up from modern armless chairs, he's found.

Here are some Greengoss suggestions for furnishing grandma's apartment:

Avoid stark, modern furniture or heavy period pieces. The elderly are unaccustomed to highly contemporary lines, but also dislike ornate mahogany pieces which are apt to make a room dreary and cheerless. They prefer a happy medium like Early American furniture in a cheery maple finish.

Higher than usual coffee tables, chests and built-ins will save the elderly from painful bending and stooping.

Beats should be low enough to get into and out of without strain and stress, and should have hospital springs because older persons are likely to be ill more often.

Avoid throw rugs on floors since they become hazards to the elderly who do not lift their feet much when walking and may be more liable to trip.

Colors should be clear and contrasting and patterns simple and distinct to make it easier for fading eyesight to distinguish the beginning and end of a rug, the jutting outline of a fireplace or a chair's location. Bright colors are desirable, but never exotic or extreme ones. Most older persons are too conservative to live with bright red, for example.

Britain's Favorite Game Is Talk About Princess

By MARGARET SAVILLE
London - (UPI) - A year ago at this time, it was being pointed out that Princess Margaret was entering her 30th year still a spinster, and whatever was going to happen to the girl?

Now with her 30th birthday only days away (August 21) the pretty Meg is a newly married woman, a spinster no longer. But the question still is: What's going to happen to her?

The same question is being asked about the man who took her out of the spinster ranks, ex-photographer Antony Armstrong-Jones.

If Tony and Margaret know the answers, they aren't telling. Buckingham Palace indicates it knows and that there will be an announcement soon.

Meantime, the future paths of the princess and prince charming provide the subject for Britain's favorite guessing game.

Of the princess it is said (1) she is going to drop gradually out of the royal picture and settle down to being an elegant housewife and mother and (2) she is not going to relinquish any of the regal prerogatives or duties, except for possible periods of retirement to have babies.

Most of the betting is that Princess Margaret is not going to give up her royal position, by inattention to it or otherwise. Frequently quoted these days in connection is her famous remark a few years ago that "I can't imagine anything better than being who I am."

Against that is the fact the princess has only four public engagements to fulfill before the end of November, against 20 such appointments during the same period last year.

As for Tony Armstrong-Jones, since he married his princess in Westminster Abbey last May, he has done nothing - so far as is known - except be a husband. At least nothing professionally. He gave up his photography business before marriage.

The guessing about what Armstrong-Jones will do has been even livelier than about Margaret. Jobs he has been reported looking into have run a wide gamut and included those of stock broker, film producer (with Douglas Fairbanks Jr.), architectural designing and interior designing. It appears generally conceded that photography is out, except as a hobby.

Technically, he is free to choose any job he wants. The official palace position on this has been stated in these terms: "Mr. Armstrong-Jones is not a member of the royal family . . . and he may come and go as he pleases, and do whatever he likes at his own will."

But - and it's a big but - as husband of a royal prin-

Food For Survival Topic For NFA Coming Convention

"Food for survival in the atomic age" will be the theme of the program of the state convention of Natural Food Associates which will be held at Wilson school Thursday, August 25. Twenty or more display booths dealing with the subject are planned.

One of the booths will contain a display of chromatograms made of both natural (unprocessed) and processed foods and demonstrating differences between 15 pairs of commonly used foods. Members report that chromatograms have been used only in recent years to illustrate hidden differences in soils.

Another display will show organically grown food, including fruits and vegetables, which will be auctioned at the end of the meeting.

The "natural control" of aphids and other insects will be demonstrated in another booth. Atlas Fish Fertilizer company will show colored slides on tuberous begonias and chrysanthemums in the afternoon.

Immediately after the banquet the NFA film, "Living Soil," will be shown.

The banquet will consist entirely of organically produced food and attendance will be limited to 225 persons. Tickets are on sale at health food stores or from members.

All persons interested are invited to the event. A $1 registration fee will be charged.

Split Level Home Pool Designed

United Press International
Now available is a "split level" home swimming pool. The pool is built above ground, fenced with wood and colored weathercloth. It is accessible from only one point - a staircase and railing leading to louvered doors - so that children and pets can't wander in alone. Rimming the water is a redwood sundeck, large enough for entertaining and sunbathing. Includes a safety ledge, diving board, kickboard, underwater light, self-filtering system, maintenance equipment, and 500 square feet of storage space under the deck. A "soleroof" makes the pool usable in winter.

An inch-thick mattress-float of ultra-light plastic foam is buoyant in water without inflation. It folds to a soft 25-inch square and has a non-slip vinyl plastic cover. Dry-land uses: deck chair cushion, station wagon mattress, sleeping bag pad, extra bed.

For resting at the poolside, there is a new metal-framed canvas sling called the "sun scoop." It looks like a super ironing board padded with latex foam and it has a circular built-in pillow cover in a flaming sun patterned fabric. The scoop's four steel legs are on casters for easier moving.
