82,000 Visitors See OSC Museum During 2 Years

Corvallis—Guns, dolls, Indian artifacts, coins, butter churns and the famous Hank Monk stage coach were among the items viewed by the record number of 82,548 visitors to Oregon State college's Horner Museum of the Country this past biennium.

During this two-year period, 912 tours were given to school groups with 26,448 students participating. The museum is located on the ground level of the OSC coliseum.

A total of 477 display items were acquired by the museum during the biennium, making a total of 12,414 articles that have been presented to the museum since its beginning.

Items acquired during the past year include Early American glassware and majolica, extensive shell collection, an elaborate silver-decorated saddle used by the late Gov. Douglas McKay, and oriental art objects.

Miss Lula M. Stephenson, museum curator, said other items exhibited include pioneer furniture and clothing, Indian artifacts from pre-Columbian to present, quilt collection and old-time candle-molds.

One of the major items displayed is a replica of the nation's capitol which is valued at $70,000. In addition to the historical collections, the museum includes a natural history section with mounted birds and animals of Oregon, fossil and mineral collections, and an art room with art pieces from around the world.

Many items are on loan to the museum from descendants of pioneer families. Campus visitors have found the museum an excellent place to while away time to good advantage. Items can be found to interest both the old and young, Miss Stephenson said.

The museum is open week days from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Saturday, 10 a.m. to noon and 2 to 5 p.m.; and Sunday, 2 to 5 p.m. There is no admission charge.

Duck Hunting Law Faces Court Test

Albany—Two Linn county residents have launched a court test against a recent voter-approved law restricting duck hunting over feed grounds.

Dale Fischer and Basil T. Williams, who together own or lease 184 acres of land in the county, called the law unconstitutional, and charged that it discriminates against the business of waterfowl hunting in Linn county as compared with other counties.

The two men have requested a circuit court injunction against enforcement of the law. The law was also approved by voters in Benton county.

Resources Group To See Astoria Fishing

Salem—Members of the Interim Committee on Natural Resources will survey commercial and sports fishing in the Astoria area next week.

The group will cruise with the gillnet fleet and visit a cannery next Wednesday and on Thursday will be taken to see sports fishing at the mouth of the Columbia river.

Impatient Bather Caught in Water Tap

Jackson, Miss. — Martha Hierro, 26, was impatient when the bath water didn't run fast enough, so she stuck her finger in the water tap trying to clear it to make the water run faster.

An hour later firemen had to break down the door of the bathroom to free her. Blushing Martha just barely managed to cover herself with a nightgown.

Foundation Aid To Promote Study Of Pasture Pests

Corvallis — Research on a crop problem troubling Oregon farmers will be carried on again this year through a fellowship awarded by the George R. Hyslop Foundation, according to a report of the foundation.

Richard H. Hart, graduate student in farm crops at Oregon State college, will receive the $1,000 fellowship to carry on research aimed at controlling velvetgrass in the state's irrigated pastures. Velvetgrass is a serious problem in many of the irrigated pastures, said Dr. J. Ritchie Cowan, head of the OSC farm crops department and secretary of the foundation.

Velvetgrass can now be controlled with chemical sprays, but this method is quite expensive. Hart will try use of fertilizers and controlled grazing to keep the weed in check. Value of the weed for grazing, and how well livestock eat it, will also be investigated during the study.

Memorial The foundation's fellowship plan was set up as a memorial to Professor George R. Hyslop, a former head of the OSC farm crops department. The memorial was created with gifts donated by friends of Professor Hyslop following his death in 1945.

The foundation is still receiving gifts from friends of Professor Hyslop, and from others interested in maintaining a high level of research on crop problems in the state. Cowan said. Donations are either added to the trust fund with the income used for graduate research projects, or donations can be made for specific research projects with both principal and income used to solve some farm crops problem.

The new board of trustees of the foundation includes Wade Newbegin, Portland, president; F. E. Price, dean of the OSC school of agriculture, vice-president; H. D. Proudfoot, Portland; Tom DeArmand, Hubbard; and Cowan.

Portland Group Opposes Measures

Portland — A Portland group has announced its opposition to eight proposed city measures calling for $32 million in tax increases.

Larry Gould, vice president of Portland Tax Savers, said the group will fight measures calling for additional taxes for sewers, civil defense, parks and recreation, the zoo, the dock commission, traffic signals, traffic dividers, and the fire and police fund.

Gould said the group's executive board had voted to oppose the measures because "the necessity of this additional tax burden has not been proved."

The group also approved a letter to the state sanitary authority opposing "indiscriminate burning" in Portland's urban renewal area or "any place in the city of Portland that violates state laws."
