The Medical Roundup by Walter Alvarez

I get a number of letters from people, some of whom feel strongly that a man should be present at the birth of his child. They feel he ought to stand by his wife and he ought to see her suffer. Perhaps, then, he will appreciate her all the more.

I hear from some doctors who say that they will permit the man to watch, if he is very anxious to, and his wife does not object. Other doctors say that they can't be bothered to have a layman around in a place where everything must be kept sterile.

A man who knows nothing about asepsis (the keeping of bad germs away from the mother) might turn out to be a "bull in a china shop." As some doctors said, if sudden things should happen to go wrong, and the doctor had to deliver the child quickly in order to save his or her life, he couldn't have a husband around who might faint, and fall onto a table of sterile supplies.
