The proud father had waited a long time for this moment. His twin boys seemed old enough now to see their first baseball game, and on a bright afternoon he took them to the park. They sat attentively as he explained each nuance of the national game.

When the boys got home, they told their mother all about it. "One man throws a ball, and the other waves at it with a club, and they all wear..."

"But first tell Mommy who won," said the father.

"Oh, I did," said one of the twins. "Six hot dogs to five."

Numbers Trick

By Quentin R. Howard

This might seem impossible, but try it and you'll see that it can be done! Take a piece of paper and a pencil. Write down your house address or box number. Double this number. Add five. Multiply by 50. Add your age. Now add 365. Then subtract 615.

If you haven't made a mistake, the last two numbers of the total will be your age. The others will be your house or box number.

Now some kids believe man descended from a monkey, but they also believe the monkey descended from a nose cone.

An elderly lady rushed into the doctor's office and excitedly informed him that she had a rare and fatal kidney disease.

"Nonsense," the doctor snapped. "You couldn't possibly know whether you had that disease. There's not the slightest discomfort with it!"

"Aha!" the patient replied. "That's my symptom exactly!"
