

Nixon Aides Wary Of Political Polls

Washington—(UPI)—Vice President Richard M. Nixon's presidential campaign strategists Saturday viewed with a wary eye national polls showing Nixon running well ahead of Democratic Nominee John F. Kennedy. They said they felt the number of undecided voters is greater than the latest major poll shows.

Robert H. Finch, Nixon's campaign director, told newsmen he felt Nixon is "ahead at this point," largely as a result of the Republican National convention, the vice president's acceptance speech and other factors. But, Finch said, he was not taking undue comfort from the latest national poll showing Nixon running 50 to 44 ahead of Kennedy, with six per cent of the voters undecided.

"I still think the large group of undecided voters is higher than the six per cent that shows in the poll," Finch added.

Small Businesses Continue To Flourish Despite Risk Involved

By HENRY J. BECHTOLD
UPI Financial Editor

New York—(UPI)—Despite the cries about big business getting bigger at the expense of small business, the business population still consists predominantly of small firms.

This was pointed out by the Institute of Life Insurance which said a long view of the business population and its persistent growth trend indicates that the American economy still retains much of its traditional spirit of venture and individualism.

A basic element, the Institute said, is that economic expansion and the increase in population have consistently opened up new opportunities for individual enterprise and self-employment as well as providing job opportunities for a growing labor force.

Millions of Americans have had the courage and initiative to respond to this development by striking out on their own, and many have succeeded, it noted.

New Business Concerns

The number of business concerns has been moving up steadily year after year, and now is at a new high of just under 4.75 million, according to figures of the U.S. Department of Commerce. The figures also show that over the long term the business population has shown a greater rate of growth than has the number of people in the general population.

Despite the risks involved in starting a new business, more than 400,000 new establishments were launched last year in ventures ranging from gas stations to manufacturing enterprises. In the decade of the fifties there were 3.8 million new business incorpor-ations, or about 400,000 more than in the 1940s.

The institute noted that risk, an inherent part of nearly every venture, is even bigger these days considering the added problems brought by the increase in the tax burden, the impact of inflation on production and other costs of doing business, and increasing government regulation.

Bankruptcies Up, Too

Thus, the institute said, it is not surprising to find business "births" accompanied by a high mortality rate. Last year 82 businesses were discontinued for every 100 started, a ratio that has shown little change over the years.

The business population figures compiled by the Commerce Department do not include agriculture and the professional services, two strongholds of individual ownership and operation. Nor do they include millions of persons in other fields of activity where the individual is essentially on his own, and where the rewards and accomplishments are primarily dependent on a person's own initiative, efforts and capacity.

Many of the more than 200,000 full-time life insurance agents in this country are an example of this latter group, the institute noted.

Limited Employees

While there has been a growth in large firms, such as in areas where tremendous capital investments are indispensable for successful operation, the figures show that three out of every four non-farm business firms have fewer than four employees and that only one in 20 employs 20 persons or more. Two out of every five firms are one-man operations. Retail stores and service establishments are by far the most numerous of all business firms, with the former accounting for more than 40 per cent of the total and the latter nearly 20 per cent, the figures showed.

Construction is in third place, followed by finance, insurance and real estate.
