News and Notes From Camp White

By WALTER TOWNSEND
Just before you go into the coffee shop there is a stairway to the left. You could have passed it a hundred times without noticing it, but now you stop dead still to look.

The top part of the walls are a sunshine yellow, the bottom between an apricot and rose shade, and the railings, purple! Doesn't that sound gay, and surely at least suggest an area of fun?

That's just where that stairway does lead to — the indoor recreation — which men particularly enjoy, one for pool, another for cards, shuffleboard space, and the "Green Room" which larger groups used for parties, meetings, TV and other activities.

The whole thing is getting a "new look." The newly painted walls are a light blue green, and everything so fresh and attractive — an invitation to the members and volunteers who act as hostesses, to spend many pleasant hours there.

A frail, white-haired, distinguished-looking gentleman stopped his wheel chair long enough for a greeting. He smiled and little wrinkles appeared around the twinkling blue eyes.

The gloves which he used as he propelled himself along came off revealing soft hands, which matched the gentle voice.

His 83 years have been full of adventure, and encounters with colorful people of the old West.

Frank Stewart knew Sitting Bull well. Said Stewart in his ward, "Sitting Bull was the greatest leader this country ever had." Others included Buffalo Bill, Little Annie Oakley who "could shoot the head off a running quail."

Stewart also knew Calamity Jane, female scout, frontier woman and one of the most picturesque characters of the Early West, whom Captain Egan once laughing said, "I name you Calamity Jane, the heroine of the plains."

Stewart was in Dakota Territory in 1890. He was 12 years old living with his father and mother in a town called Gettysburg, Dakota Territory. "Women, old men, and children were massacred by the U.S. Cavalry at the Battle of Wounded Knee," Stewart stated.

This was a revenge action on account of the Custer disaster. The Indians were all buried on the prairie in one hole.

Sitting Bull was killed at Standing Rock by his own men a week prior to Battle of Wounded Knee.

Stewart two years later became a stagecoach driver, 1896-'97, between Billings, Mont., and Lovell, Wyo. The war with Spain broke out in April, 1898, and Stewart "joined up." After the war he went back to Dakota Territory.

Teddy Roosevelt was a two-gun man, Stewart said, and made it hot for many an outlaw on the Little Missouri River, where the Great American was in the cattle business with a French Count, who was a millionaire.

Suddenly Stewart had finished talking. He began to draw on his gloves over his soft hands.

People and places in the news are always interesting. Attracting more than usual attention at the station library is a book of excellent photographs showing London by Tony Armstrong-Jones, London photographer, and Princess Margaret's husband.

Attention was called to the volume by Chief Librarian Enid Holmes. It is a superb pictorial book which proves that he can take not only delightful photographs but that he can catch forever a spontaneous, personal and unforgettable vision of London and its people, Miss Holmes said.

The domiciliary is always increasing its program to benefit and enrich the life of the members here. A recent new activity, made possible by the VAWS, is the reading and discussion group for men with badly impaired eyesight.

The men included in this group are not totally blind but cannot read even the newspapers or often even their own letters. The volunteers working with this group read from current literature and lead discussions about present day happenings and fill special requests.

In the early morning, the new coffee shop looks like a pirate's den.

Patches on their eye. Lantern-jawed pensioners. Shirts open at the neck. Tattooed hands with "John Paul Jones" in blue ink.

And the cigarette smoke. Ellis J. De Hart, 62, single, spent the past several months in the Florida Keys. Saw only one person in swimming.

The rest of the 125-mile beach was covered with real estate ads. The whole area, according to Ellis, is covered with saloons, night clubs, real estate gags, and brush.

He was glad to get back to Oregon, and especially to the Domiciliary, he said.

Marshall Purvine Jackson often speaks of the girl he had in Germany, after World War I. She was Anna Mechen Spangdolen. And she lived in a village of 300 people, where they burned kerosene lamps. He had many dates with her in only two months. A little short, pretty German girl, dark hair, fair skinned.

Jackson often wonders what may have become of her.

Local Man Named Head Of Oregon Cavalcade Group

George McUne, Medford, was elected president of the Ontario Oregon Cavalcade, Inc., at their annual reunion in Independence, Ore., recently.

This was the first time that the group has gathered since the end of their four-month wagon trek from Independence, Mo., to Independence, Ore., last August.

Other officers elected included Roy Brabham, vice president, Eugene; Jean Marshall, secretary, Roseburg.

GP School Chief Dies on Hike

Bend - (UP) - Earl Stewart, 61, principal of the Seventh Day Adventist school in Grants Pass died of apparent natural causes while hiking from Horse Lake to Merrill lake about 43 miles southwest of here Friday.

The body was being brought out of the area Saturday.

Stewart and the Melvin Parker family, also of Grants Pass hiked into the area Thursday.

Only known survivor of the victim is his wife, Marie. The body was to be taken to Eugene.

Gold Hill, fourth; Nikki Hammond, West Side, fifth; Bonnie Cheney, West Side, sixth; Mary Anne Barker, Jacksonville, seventh; Sheila Franklin, Medford, eighth; James Moorman, Rogue River, ninth; Linda Cornutt, Gold Hill, tenth.

and Dave Gastman, treasurer, Cottage Grove.

Aside from parades, dinners, camping out with the wagons and other reunion festivities, much emphasis was placed on the foundation of the Oregon Trail Memorial museum.

The museum, which will be constructed in Independence, is being sponsored by the On to Oregon Cavalcade and the city of Independence.

The museum will preserve all the artifacts accumulated by the 1959 covered wagon train in its journey and will become a repository for other pioneer articles.

The people of the state of Oregon will be asked to assist in this project by securing memberships in the Cavalcade Museum association, according to Cavalcade officials.

Police Chief Bitten By Half a Snake

Royalton, Ill. - (UP) - Police chief Joe Finley Saturday nursed a finger bitten by half a snake in the grass.

The non-poisonous reptile apparently was divided by Finley's power lawnmower and the front half bit the chief when he bent over to retrieve a broken mower blade.
