Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

MR. BIRDSEED threw restraint to the wind and bought himself a four-seater airplane. Came a bright Sunday and he invited the bachelor next door to go up in it with his wife and himself.

"The great thing about flying up here in the wide blue yonder," he exulted to his bachelor friend, "is that I don't have to worry about traffic jams, crazy pedestrians or traffic lights—and best of all, there's no back seat driving!"

Just then his wife, seated in the rear, looked out of the window and cried, "Robert! Look out for those birds!"

Overheard in a Hollywood studio: "That producer is just about as important as a parachute on a submarine!"
Overheard in the garment center: "I wanted my son to inherit my business—but the government beat him to it!"

A throat doctor has just bought a fine new home in Providence. He calls it Gesund Heights.
