Swansdown About Perfect As Insulating Material

The list of materials man has used to insulate buildings, refrigerators, thermos bottles or clothing against heat, cold or sound, is almost endless. In the long and varied list are such things as glass, stone, fibres, wood and porcelain, as well as a "cushion of air." Some are good, but none are perfect.

Clothing itself is a form of insulation. Those who spend a great deal of time in cold climates must have adequate insulation to keep their body fluids from freezing. When feathers are added to fabrics, almost perfect insulation becomes possible.

Feathers and fur seem to be very close to the perfect material. On the mammal or bird the fur or the feathers keep out the cold as well as insulating the body against the heat.

'Swansdown'

All of which points up a very important fact. With all of man's inventive ability he has never come very close to equaling the insulating qualities of natural materials.

The soft under-feathers of the swan comes about as close to perfection as a feather could possibly get. Real swansdown is no softer nor finer than eiderdown, the under-feathers of the cold water eider duck, who spends most of its life in ice cold water and is very comfortable at the same time because of the "down" under its contour feathers. Even the name "swansdown" indicates its extreme softness and lightness.

On the body of a bird as large as a swan there naturally would be a great amount of genuine swansdown. The chickens, as well as most other birds that do not immerse themselves in cold water, are short of down. There is less need for the insulation where extreme cold is not encountered. So we never hear of "hensdown," or "turkeydown." Strange enough, neither do we concern ourselves with "goose-down," although geese really do have the protection of "down," under the contour feathers.

Near Perfect

Nothing man has ever developed has come very close to down as far as insulating goes. Also the feathers of ducks, geese and even chickens come pretty close to a perfect material for pillows. Even after being crushed by heads pressed heavily against them for long intervals of time, the feather pillow snaps back or can easily be "fluffed up" by a few sharp shakes.

The old-fashioned featherbed of grandmother's time was about as soft as a body-pillow could possibly be. So far it has never been duplicated for warmth or softness. The baby duck sleeps in a feather-bed; the cygnet sleeps the warmest, easiest and coslest of all-it sleeps in "swansdown."

Flights Increase At Local Airport

Total landings and takeoffs at Medford's municipal airport during July were up from last year, but passenger traffic was down, according to Airport Manager G. J. Gutjahr's monthly report.

Some 6,736 flights used the airport last month compared to 5,989 the previous month and 5,914 during July, 1959.

Passengers numbered 5,584 during July, below both last month's total of 5,605 and the total of a year ago when 7,700 passengers were recorded.

Of the 6,736 flights recorded at the airport last month, 920 of them were regularly scheduled flights of the three airlines that serve the airport -United, West Coast and Pacific Air lines.

Express totaled 3,429 pounds during July compared to 3,632 pounds the previous month and 4,468 pounds a year ago. Air freight totaled 37,573 pounds, up from last month's 20,224 pounds but below the 45,845 pounds total of July, 1959.

Airport revenue during July totaled $4,210, including $843 in landing fees.

'Dollars For Durno' Gaining Momentum

"Dollars for Durno" is gaining momentum throughout Oregon's fourth district, it was reported today, three weeks after the fund-raising drive started for Republican congressional candidate Edwin R. Durno.

Local women's committees throughout the seven counties of the district are setting up coffees, bridge and canasta parties, and other social gatherings.

Mrs. Lester Adams, Applegate, vice-chairman of the Durno for Congress committee and director of the drive, stated that the campaign had met with enthusiastic response.

In the Medford area, Mrs. Earl Lawson, Mrs. C. Rease Braley, and Mrs. Chester Guches are among local women participating in the campaign.

Lawyer 1st To File For New Judgeship

Salem – (UPI) – Teunis S. Wire, Hood River attorney, is the first candidate to file for the newly created district judgeship in Hood River county.

Wire's petition with 335 names was received by Sec. of State Howell Appling Monday.

Hood River has gained the new district court because its population has reached a point where one is automatically created.

Billy Graham Predicts End of the World

Zurich–(UPI)–Evangelist Billy Graham told an audience of 15,000 Sunday the end of the world is near.

Graham, who warned the same thing three days ago in Bern, said many things foretell the end of the world.

"Jesus Christ will come soon and all of us should get ready," he said.
