

Rail Strike Causes Fear Of Economic Crisis In East

WAITING IN VAIN—Sixteen-year-old Ellen Schmitz of St. Louis waits in vain at Union station in Chicago Thursday, typifying the plight of many travelers in Chicago and other cities as the Pennsylvania Railroad strike stranded thousands of passengers.

Both Sides Say Strike Could Be A Long One

 Philadelphia—(UPI)—Fear of creeping economic paralysis caused by the shutdown of the giant Pennsylvania Railroad hung over the eastern sector of the nation today.

Time was the big factor. Experts believe the next 24 hours will portend the economic repercussions by the strike of 20,000 maintenance workers.

A protracted walkout could cut deeply into the economic life of the 30 million persons along the 10,000 mile system that served 13 states and the District of Columbia.

Both sides in the dispute between the PRR and the Transport Workers Union have indicated the strike could be a long one.

Thousands of commuters in New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Washington and New Jersey were inconvenienced on the first day of the strike Thursday—the first in the road's 114-year history.

Today a new obstacle was in the offing—the Labor Day exodus.

Buses, airplanes, other railroads and automobiles used by riders to circumvent the strike will be heavily taxed by thousands of excursionists on a final summer fling. Traffic jams, delays at terminals and general confusion were considered a certainty.

New Talks Sited
 Efforts to end the three-year dispute over job definitions and "farming out" equipment repair work also was scheduled for today.

Francis A. O'Neill Jr., chairman of the National Railway Mediation Board, disclosed he intended to hold meetings with both sides through the long Labor Day weekend.

O'Neill conferred separately with both sides Thursday but results of the meetings were not disclosed.

TWU President Michael J. Quill said in New York his negotiators were standing by for word to resume talks with railroad officials.

He said his union would stand by for a resumption of joint negotiations only until Tuesday morning when top TWU officers will tour striking locals.

Trucks Involved In Highway Crash
 A truck and trailer and a pickup truck were involved in a rear end collision just north of Ashland on Highway 99 about 6:25 p.m. yesterday, according to state police.

The truck and trailer was operated by Carl Assello, 55, El Monte, Calif., and John William Murphree, 50, Ashland, was operating the pickup.

Both vehicles were southbound on Highway 99 near Billings rd., when the larger truck slowed as it approached a hill. The Murphree truck crashed into the rear of the other vehicle, police reported.

Police said Murphree suffered minor injuries. He was advised that a complaint would be filed against him in Ashland Justice court for following too close.

Stocks Turn Easy; Specialties Move

New York—(UPI)—Stocks turned easier today with specialties making the bigger moves and pivoting operating in a narrow range.

Brokers pointed out that most of the recent volume has been in low-priced speculative issues with most traders in heavy industries sitting on the sidelines awaiting the Labor Day holiday.

Steels moved narrowly today while oils, metals and motors worked fractionally easier. Studebaker - Packard dropped about 3/4 point.

Jack Tells 'K' Not To Meddle In U.S. Political Affairs

Manchester, N.H.—(UPI)—Sen. John F. Kennedy flew in for an airport rally today after a sharp warning to Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev not to meddle in U.S. politics.

The Democratic nominee, accompanied by his wife, Jacqueline, staged a one-day New England preview of the campaign which he formally opens Saturday night across the continent in Anchorage, Alaska.

Small Crowd
 A police-estimated crowd of about 1,000 persons greeted Kennedy.

Kennedy's New Hampshire manager, Fred Forbes, had expected at least 2,000 or 3,000 persons.

The small size of the crowd was attributed to the fact that most Manchester area residents were at work and those who weren't had left on Labor Day excursions.

After the airport rally, Kennedy flew to Presque Isle, Maine, to press his campaign in that state. Mrs. Kennedy returned by automobile to Boston, then flew to their Hyannis Port, Mass., home.

Kennedy issued his warning to Khrushchev before leaving Boston.

"He will, I hope, confine himself to those matters which come under his province," the nominee said.

"Outside Intervention"
 "We do not desire outside intervention," he said.

He said the Soviet leader's visit should "serve as another reminder of the great struggle going on in the United Nations and on the world stage between the forces of freedom and of Communism."

The candidate said minimum wage legislation should be enacted early in 1961.

"The raising of the minimum wage and its extension to cover millions of unprotected American workers must be one of the first items on the agenda of the next administration," Kennedy said.

The Democratic White House aspirant made his statement in a speech at an airport rally in Manchester, N.H., first stop in a one day swing through traditionally Republican Maine and New Hampshire.
