Seattle Police Would Like To Have Talk With Antique Dealer

Seattle (UPI)—If there's one man Seattle police would like to meet today, it would be Guy Raoul Rockwell. The missing Seattle antique dealer might prove to be the missing link in the mysterious disappearance of his former wife, Mrs. Manzanita Rockwell, 40, and her daughter, Dolores Ann Mearns, 18. The two women have been missing for five months and Rockwell, who is being sought on a grand larceny by "bunco" charge, is gone too.

Meanwhile, in an ugly looking two-story frame house in Seattle where Rockwell lived with his ex-wife and her daughter and where he operated his antique shop, human remains have been found in a septic tank. Belonged to Woman Investigating officers say the human remains, that included an ear, several fingers and arm bones, large amounts of hair and several specimens of tissue, belonged to the body of a single person—a young woman.

And the question on the lips of many Seattleites today is who is Guy Raoul Rockwell, a man of mystery—even to his own family. Rockwell came to Seattle in 1948. His name at that time was Guy Muldalen, but he quickly changed it and a few other things too. He composed a romantic new account of his life and added nine years to his life.

His brother, Michael Muldalen of San Diego, Calif., recently told how Rockwell disappeared after the war and how he finally located him through a detective agency. "After I located him," Muldalen said, "I called him and we made a truce. The terms were that he'd keep in touch with me if I'd keep our parents and other brothers from bothering him."

Claimed Army Service The story Rockwell manufactured when he came to Seattle was that he was born in France, 45 years ago, the son of an antique dealer. He claimed that he came to this country at 17, and was immediately accepted at the University of California without formal training because of his linguistic ability. Rockwell also said he served in the army six years as a second lieutenant. Actually, Rockwell was born in Brooklyn 36 years ago. His father did not deal in antiques, his family was Irish, not French, and he was kept out of the service due to an ear problem.

Other mystery shrouds the personality of the 36-year-old pipe-smoking antique dealer. One of the clues to what makes him tick may come from the women in his life. His missing former wife, Mrs. Manzanita Rockwell, was his second mate. He divorced her July 26, and charged her with "cruel and inhuman treatment," and desertion. She had been missing since April 1 and she still is.

Rockwell married Mrs. Evelyn Emerson, 41, three days after the divorce. Her mother, Mrs. Clifford Winkler, told police she gave Rockwell a $10,000 check to buy Indian artifacts in British Columbia, a few days after the marriage. Mrs. Emerson Rockwell described her husband of a few months "as the possessor of an overpowering personality."

Recently, Rockwell made it a point to let people know he was going to Vancouver, B.C., to purchase the Indian artifacts. He also said that he would go to Africa in September to study Ashanti bronzes on a Fulbright Fellowship, which the U. S. State Department in Washington, D.C., says he has never received.

A Seattle clerk reported to police that she waited on Rockwell on or about Aug. 15. Police had traced his trail to an Aug. 4, airplane flight to San Francisco. Now, a mystery "midnight woman" has entered the picture. Richard H. White, the operator of a Seattle boat business and a frequent customer of Rockwell's shop, has told police of "a strangely beautiful girl that is very dramatic looking."

"She drove a large car and was expensively dressed," White said. "She arrived just around midnight when Rockwell was closing the shop. He never introduced us to her, but she seemed to be waiting for him."

Odor Control Unit In Paperboard Mill

Albany, Ore. — Completion of a new odor control installation at its Albany pulp and paperboard mill was announced today by Western Kraft Corporation. The new unit completes a program of odor control costing in excess of $300,000 which the company began in 1955.

An odor survey in the Albany area conducted Aug. 31 by the air pollution control division of the state sanitary authority showed a marked improvement in area odor conditions. It showed 61 per cent of the observations had no detectable odor whatever, 32 per cent showed threshold level of detection, and 7 per cent showed a definite, though not strong odor present. None of the observations resulted in a strong or overpowering odor of sulphur compounds.

Richard E. Hatchard, chief of the air pollution control division, said this survey indicated a marked improvement in area odor conditions as a result of the installation. He added that while one survey under one set of weather conditions is not necessarily conclusive, it does indicate significant reduction in the amount of odorous compounds escaping to the atmosphere from the Western Kraft plant, compared to surveys made under similar weather conditions prior to the installation.
