

Special Institutes Planned at Oregon State During Year

Corvallis - Three special institutes for science and mathematics teachers will be given this school year at Oregon State college, one of the major U. S. centers for the teacher improvement programs sponsored by National Science Foundation.

Forty-eight high school science and mathematics teachers from 21 states have been selected to participate in the fourth academic-year institute. They will be on campus throughout the year taking advanced science training.

Sixty-five teachers from schools within driving distance of OSC will be picked soon for training in two in-service institutes, given on an evening commuter basis. One institute will be in science for elementary school teachers and the other for junior and senior high school mathematics teachers.

The institutes are part of the National Science Foundation program to improve science teaching and to increase the U. S. supply of top quality scientists and engineers. OSC was one of only 16 colleges in the country chosen by NSF to start the academic-year institutes in 1957-58 and will be one of 33 giving the training in 1960-61.

Each of the 48 teachers in the academic-year institute will receive a $3,000 grant, plus tuition and fees, travel, book and dependent allowances. OSC was granted $290,000 by National Science Foundation to conduct the training. Dr. Stanley E. Williamson, head of science education, is director.

The 65 teachers picked for the in-service institutes will receive travel expenses and a book allowance for their advanced course work. Dr. Albert R. Poole, professor of mathematics, and Dr. Albert L. Leeland, associate professor of education, are directors of the two institutes.

Neuberger, Smith Debate Issues in Portland Meeting

Portland-UPP-Maurine Neuberger and Elmo Smith, opponents for the U.S. Senate, squared off at each other on medical care, aid to education, import quotas, employment and other issues in a debate here Wednesday night.

Smith, a Republican, said he would support a compulsory medical insurance program for the elderly, incorporated into the social security program, that would apply only to persons over 40 who were not otherwise insured.

Mrs. Neuberger, a Democrat, called for a medical care program for the elderly based on social security and drafted along lines of the Forand Bill.

The two candidates differed on federal aid to education, import quotas and national spending.

Mrs. Neuberger said federal aid to education would be "a great help to Oregon schools." Smith replied while he would support federal aid "to a limited degree," he feared "the tendency would be

Jack Welcomes Union Support

Portland-UPP - Democratic Presidential Candidate John F. Kennedy said Wednesday night he would "welcome" support from members of the Teamsters and West Coast Longshoremen's unions even though he will continue to oppose their leaders.

Kennedy said at a labor committee dinner here that he has had his "differences" with Teamster President James R. Hoffa and President Harry Bridges of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union.

He said those differences "will continue."

"But I want to make it very clear that I welcome the support of members of those two unions," Kennedy said.

Mrs. Neuberger criticized Smith for stating "we do not need mass federal spending."

She retorted that both space-age industry and harbor development, which Smith backed, fell into federal spending category.

The hour-long debate was moderated by newsman William L. A. M. B. C. Candidates were placed under a time limitation and answered a series of prepared questions.

In the Days News

By FRANK JENKINS

Labor Day traffic aftermath:

California led the states in Labor Day highway deaths with 40, followed by Texas with 28, Pennsylvania with 24 and New York with 21.

QUESTION:

Are Californians the nation's most reckless drivers?

The answer is no. How come then, you ask, that California leads the nation in highway deaths over the Labor Day week end?

THE answer is quite simple.

California has more cars than any other state. It is followed in top automobile ownership by Texas, Pennsylvania and New York.

FROM London:

Two missing employees of the United States Security Agency turned up at a Moscow news conference and announced that they had defected to the Soviet Union, according to Tass, the Russian news agency.

Tass said they read a statement saying they had defected because they "became convinced the U.S. government knowingly makes false and deceptive statements to defend its own policy and condemn the actions of other nations."

HMMMMMM.

Judging by the language of the statement, and assuming that they actually used those words, I'd guess that they "defected" because they're screwballs and so gravitated naturally to the communists.

THE body of "Ole Earl"

Long, who died at Alexandria, La., is returned today to Louisiana's state capitol in Baton Rouge. One of his last wishes was he be buried on the capitol grounds alongside his brother, Huey P. Long, who was killed by an assassin's bullet a quarter of a century ago. His body was to lie in state there for the next 24 hours. At the end of that time, it will be determined where he will be buried. There seems to be some controversy over the place of burial.

There will be eight pallbearers at the funeral, among them Earl Long's nephew, U.S. Senator Russell B. Long, son of old Huey, who coined the vote-getting slogan: "Every Man a King."

The Long dynasty is far from extinct. When he died, Ole Earl was the Democratic nominee for the U.S. congress from Louisiana's 8th district, which amounts to election. Among those mentioned as his successor are Blanche Long, his estranged wife; Former State Sen. Speedy O. Long, a distant cousin; and Mrs. George Long, widow of Ole Earl's brother, who represented the district until his death three years ago.

The Long dynasty has ruled Louisiana for a long, long time, and there are plenty of Longs remaining who would like to continue it.

WHAT is a dynasty?

Webster defines it thus: "A race or succession of kings, of the same line or family; the continued lordship of a race of rulers."

Let's put it with a little more brutal frankness. A dynasty is a family or a line of succession, or a gang, that HOLDS TOO MUCH POWER IN TOO FEW HANDS TOO LONG. If we're to keep things in the U.S.A. as they have been for a long time, and as we want them to be for a long, long time to come, the best thing we can do is to keep too much power from falling into too few hands and remaining there too long.

So... I think we'll all hope that the Long dynasty in Louisiana has come to its end.
