Man to Mate

*I don't mind wiping dishes,
Or hanging clothes to dry.
I'll run the vacuum cleaner,
Peel apples for a pie.*

*I'll help you with the housework;
I'm more than happy to.
I only wish you wouldn't Tell all our friends I do.*

—Francis O. Walsh

The reducing-salon operator heard the distraught voice of a woman on the other end of the telephone line. "I'm so upset," the lady said. "My husband bought me a lovely gift last night, and I can't get into it!"

"Well, don't worry," said the reducing expert. "A few appointments here, and we'll have you slim enough to get into that new dress."

"Dress! What dress?" the woman cried. "My husband bought me a Volkswagen!"

QUIPS AND QUOTES

A pollster was canvassing the neighborhood in a straw vote on the coming presidential election. "May I see the gentleman of the house?" he asked a large woman who answered at one door.

"No," snapped the woman beligerently.

"But I only want to know what party he belongs to," the pollster explained.

"Well, you can take a good look," the woman said sternly. "I'm the party."

During enrollment week, school authorities were carefully screening out any children under six because of overcrowded conditions. One youngster looked particularly young to be starting school.

"Let me hear you say some words," said a skeptical teacher.

The tot looked up at her and asked: "Purely irrelevant words?"
