

Meeting in Eugene

Eugene - (UPI) - The Oregon Veterinary Medical Association will meet here Sept. 22-24.

Nearly 200 persons are expected to attend the meeting which will include sessions on the latest techniques in veterinary medicine.

Grange Coop Meeting Today

The Grange Cooperative Supply Association, Central Point, is holding its 26th annual meeting at the Central Point Grange hall today.

The expansion plans announced at the annual meeting last year have now been completed and are in full operation.

These consisted of a complete new facility located at 421 A st., Ashland, which includes a store and warehouse, service station, and 60,000 gallons underground petroleum storage.

The other major improvement during the year was the erection of a new warehouse adjoining the Coop elevator in Central Point, which permitted the use of the basement of the elevator for bulk storage of grain.

The addition of the new facility and some changes in the elevator resulted in the association being able to handle the expected volume and provide a market for approximately $150,000 of grain.

Members and guests will be given full reports on the operation for the year, which resulted in a total volume of business of $1,725,581.

Members will vote for three directors at the meeting and will receive their patronage reports and checks.

More Students, More Concern About Quality of Education Marks Start of School Year

By LAWRENCE G. DERTHICK, U.S. Commissioner of Education, Department of Health, Education and Welfare (Written for United Press International)

Applying Attacks Census Figures

Salem - (UPI) - Secretary of State Howell Appling Jr. said Monday that a "rash of errors" coming to light in the Federal Census Bureau's preliminary figures for Oregon points up the need for a change in the Oregon law.

"The attorney general recently advised us," Appling said, "that we are compelled under existing Oregon law to accept the Census Bureau's preliminary figures as the guide in such things as allocation of state funds to the counties, establishment of new district and circuit judgeships, and the like."

"If he is right I question the wisdom of Oregon law accepting preliminary census announcements from the federal bureau. If the federal agency doesn't trust their own figures enough to announce them as final, I don't know why we should. If they are preliminary to the federal agency who collected them they should be preliminary under Oregon law."

Kennedy Appoints Disarmament Aide

Los Angeles - (UPI) - Democratic presidential candidate John F. Kennedy Sunday night announced appointment of Benjamin V. Cohen, a major New Deal figure, as his special assistant on disarmament.

Portland, Ore. - (UPI) - Piero Bellugi, conductor of the Portland Symphony Orchestra, has been invited to conduct the opening premiere of the music season in Naples, Italy, Sept. 29.

a new decade opens with emphasis on the word "more." There will be more students in our nation's schools and colleges - the largest enrollment in history. More has to be learned, and there is more concern about the quality of education offered than ever before.

Over the country as a whole there is a revitalized interest in education as a lifelong process. More schools are experimenting with a longer school day, and there is an increasing tendency to more completely utilize public school facilities.

Attorneys, Judges Schedule Meeting

Gearhart - (UPI) - Attorneys and judges from throughout Oregon are scheduled to meet here Sept. 21-24 for the 26th annual Oregon State Bar association meeting.

Main speakers planned for the session are Chief Justice John R. Dethmers of the Michigan Supreme Court; Charles S. Rhyne, Washington, D.C., former American Bar association president and present chairman of the ABA's Committee on World Peace Through Law; and Carl M. Marcy, chief of staff for the U.S. Senate Committee on Foreign Relations.

Youth Bound Over On Slaying Charge

Oregon City - (UPI) - Jeffrey Edward German, 17, was bound over to adult court Monday in connection with the slaying of his grandfather.

District Attorney Winston Bradshaw said he planned to take the case before the grand jury Wednesday. German was charged with the slaying of his grandfather, Veolta R. Matters, at a home near Kelso, Ore., Saturday night.

herent in education, for education that doesn't end in goodness is not good education. I am encouraged by the greatly increased interest in education throughout the country as we move into this new decade. I hope that this interest will be magnified into a concern that will overcome the problems and enable us to achieve our goal of giving every American all the education he can use, for his own happiness and progress, and for the continued advancement of human welfare.

Trend Changing Facilities

The trend toward year-round use of educational facilities is gradually changing their nature and location as well as their planned programs. Many school and college plants are now designed with the educational and recreational needs of citizens from childhood through adulthood in mind.

Educational programs authorized by the National Defense Education Act two years ago this fall will have their greatest impact this year on many aspects of American education.

About 150,000 deserving students will receive loans totaling about $65 million to help them pay for college-university undergraduate and graduate study. And 1,500 graduate students will receive three-year fellowships beginning this year.

Guidance and counseling services will be strengthened to more nearly approach the democratic ideals of developing each child to his greatest ability.

To Extend Research

Teaching of mathematics, science and modern foreign languages will be improved, through the use of new equipment, better laboratories and new techniques. Research and practice in the use of new teaching-learning aids such as television, motion pictures, radio, tape recordings and other communication equipment will be extended.

I do not wish to give the impression that machines will curtail the responsibility of the teacher. Indeed they will accentuate the teacher's role. Through educational research we are now beginning to know more about the learning process than ever before.

Studies are under way that will exert profound influence on the whole educational process. We are getting new insights, for example, into the adequacy of the traditional I.Q. tests for measuring all levels and aspects of intelligence. We have discovered that children are capable of learning much more at a far earlier age than had been believed possible.

So much for the promise of this, and future academic years. But the promise must not blind us to the problems. As we begin another school year:

-We shall again be critically short of well-qualified teachers.

-We shall again have thousands of children attending "double session" schools because of the classroom shortage.

-We still have many one-room schools and school districts too small to offer the programs children need to prepare them for living in the world of today and tomorrow.

The best schools in this country are making the greatest effort to improve and we can be proud of the quality of education they offer. Our task is to bring all of our schools up to the standards of the best. To do this will call for twice the money and effort we are now investing in our nation's educational enterprise.
