

Mysterious Disappearance of Brewer Adolph Coors Believed Solved

Clothing, Parts Of Human Bones Found by Hiker

Denver—(UPI)—The fate of millionaire brewer Adolph Coors III, who disappeared seven months ago, was all but technically certain today. He was slain, and his body abandoned unburied on a remote mountain path.

The FBI announced Wednesday that clothing which Coors wore Feb. 9, the day he disappeared, had been found by a mountain hiker, about 20 miles south of the Coors ranch and 35 miles south of Denver.

Scattered in the vicinity, officers found human bones which proved to be the skeletal remains of a man approximately Coors' build.

Denver truck driver Edward Green, 30, found the clothes Sunday while hiking through isolated mountain terrain and pot-shooting with a pistol. Coors' wife identified the weathered, tattered clothes, and an initialed pocket knife found in a trouser pocket.

Fugitive Sought

The FBI is seeking a fugitive murderer, 31-year-old Joseph Corbett Jr., who by circumstances has been linked to the Coors case. Corbett lived quietly in Denver, under the alias Walter Osborne, for four years after his escape from California's Chino State Prison.

The day after Coors was waylaid on a road near his ranch, Corbett checked out of his Denver apartment.

Corbett, originally from Seattle, has been on the FBI's "in or out wanted" list since March 30, but has eluded capture.

Corbett bought a yellow car in Denver a few weeks before Coors disappeared. Such a car was seen parked near the Coors ranch the day before wealthy, 44-year-old "Ad" Coors met with foul play.

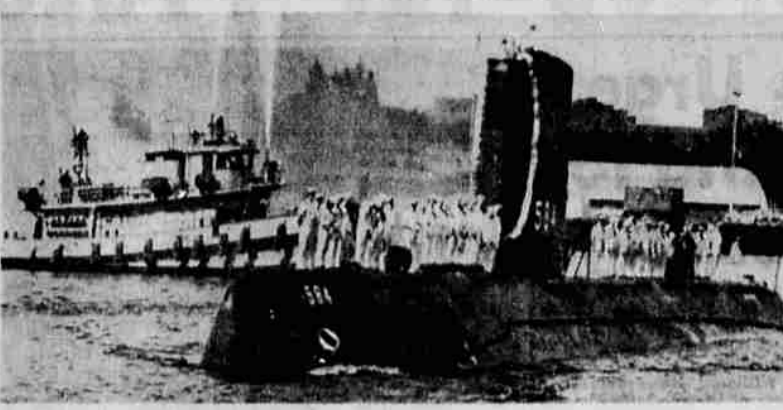

There was no suspicion that "Walter Osborne" was Corbett, or that he could be involved in the Coors case, until in mid-February the yellow car was found abandoned, and destroyed by fire, near Atlantic City, N.J.

False Pretext
A routine checkback on the car's registration, and an exhaustive search of driving license photograph files in Denver, produced a picture of "Walter Osborne." His friends, employer and landlord provided the details which convinced the FBI he was the fugitive Corbett—and revealed the suspicious timing of his departure from Denver, on the false pretext that he intended to enroll at Colorado University.

The FBI describes Corbett as aloof, intelligent, and usually calm but inclined to the dangerous delusion that he is omnipotent. He owned several rifles in Denver and is fond of target shooting. He seldom drinks, and maintains extremely fastidious personal habits.

Unconfirmed Soviet Space Success Puts Skids Under Market

New York—(UPI)—Russia's unconfirmed success in putting a man into space had the stock market on the run today.

Prices went tumbling along a broad front, with steel, some chemicals, the autos, coppers and specials were thrown for losses ranging to 2 points or more.

Although the Soviet space feat was yet to be confirmed, traders apparently are using it as an excuse to lighten their positions, some brokers feel. The reasoning is that the Soviet UN delegation will exploit the advantage to the fullest when Khrushchev arrives here on Monday.

Year-Old Coos Bay Child Killed by Car

Coos Bay—(UPI)—Chalmer Curtis Kelly, 1, Coos Bay, was struck and killed by a car near his home here Wednesday afternoon.

Nixon Refuses To Join Kennedy in Labor Promises

St. Louis, Mo.—(UPI)—Vice President Richard M. Nixon told union members today he never will join Sen. John F. Kennedy in promising to be "100 per cent" for everything labor, business or farm leaders want.

Nixon told delegates to the International Association of Machinists' convention they should "look at the record" of the Eisenhower Administration before picking a president.

The delegates apparently are pro-Kennedy. Nixon said the administration record includes more schools, hospitals and "real income" than produced under the Truman administration.

Galleries Pro-Nixon

Nixon's blunt speech, coming just a day after Kennedy addressed the 1,500 IAM delegates, brought a bi-level reaction. The galleries, obviously crowded with pro-Nixon spectators, cheered and applauded Nixon's challenging statements.

Nixon quoted Kennedy as having said in Detroit, "What the American labor movement wants for America is what I want for America and what the American labor movement opposes I oppose."

Nixon said that "if I were solely concerned about votes, I'd tell you that."

"I don't tell you that because it wouldn't be good for the labor movement for the president of the United States to make that kind of a statement to a labor organization."

Campaign Quotes

BY UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL
Sen. John F. Kennedy: (In New York City before a Liberal Party dinner): "Only liberalism . . . can repair our national power, restore our national purpose, and liberate our national energies. Only liberalism can solve the bitter problems this nation faces as we enter the turbulent 60s."

They (Republicans) "would like the people to believe that in a time of danger it would be hazardous to change party administrations. I think it would be hazardous not to change. I think it would be hazardous to continue four more years of stagnation at home and abroad . . ."

Vice President Richard M. Nixon: (At Grand Forks, N.D.): "We must never forget—there is no greater asset in the struggle with the forces of slavery than the tremendous productivity of America's farmers. Khrushchev knows this—he told me so."

"We must see that the farmers get what they do not receive today—a fair share of what they produce. The whole thing in a nutshell is—we've got to quit thinking of the farm surplus problem in a negative way . . . we've got to quit thinking in a timid way."

Mrs. Neuberger Urges Speedup in Medical Research; Smith Favors Bridge at Astoria

By United Press International
Mrs. Maurice Neuberger spoke out today for a speedup in medical research while her Republican rival for the Senate, Elmo Smith, called for inclusion of Highway 101 in the national highway defense system.

Mrs. Neuberger told a Lewis and Clark college alumni meeting in Portland that Congress should take action soon on:

Increased funds for research activities of the National Institute of Health to carry out on contract research projects in cancer, heart, arthritis, neurology and other diseases.

Expansion of medical education facilities and financial help to deserving and needy medical and science students.

More Money Needed
"Despite a vast increase in appropriations . . . during the last five years, nationally-known medical researchers report that additional funds could be profitably utilized in investigating promising leads into the cause and cure of killing and crippling diseases," Mrs. Neuberger said. She said she hoped Congress would give active consideration next year to a proposal to authorize a 10-year program of matching grants for construction of medical, dental and public health educational facilities.

Smith, campaigning on the coast Wednesday, told a luncheon at Astoria that Highway 101 should be part of the national highway defense system and that there should be a federal appropriation for a bridge across the Columbia river at Astoria.

He said the twin developments would mean millions of dollars of added income for the construction industry in Oregon and add to the tourist income.

"The vulnerability of the Oregon coast makes it logical for U.S. 101 to be a part of the defense highway system," he said.

Speaks in Seaside
Smith said in Seaside Wednesday night he has found that voters are "keenly interested in the Republican program for peace and strong national defense" and in the GOP record for financial responsibility in government.

Democratic headquarters in Portland said 13 Eastern Oregon communities would be visited by major candidates starting Sunday. The group will first stop in The Dalles and wind up the tour Wednesday evening with a rally in Madras.
