Deadline Nears For Applying for Hyatt Lake Sites

Less than two weeks remain for interested persons to file applications for five recreational homesites at Hyatt lake, according to Ross A. Youngblood, Medford district manager of the bureau of land management.

Eighteen Hyatt lake tracts were classified in 1956 for recreational homesite use, he said, but five lessees failed to construct required improvements and those tracts will be available at a drawing at 10 a.m., Sept. 27.

The drawing will be conducted by the manager of the Oregon Land office, 809 NE Sixth ave., Portland, to whom applications are to be submitted.

Rental Noted
Rental for each of the tracts is $62 per year, and advance rental for two years plus an application service fee of $10 must accompany applications. All payments submitted will be returned to unsuccessful applicants for the Hyatt lake small tracts, according to Youngblood. Tracts are about three-fourths acre in size and are on the lake front.

The five tracts are the only ones classified for recreational homesites that currently are available for leasing in the Medford district, he said. Leases in this case will be for 14 years, subject to renewal. Five years will be allowed for construction of suitable improvements.

Improvements on the 13 tracts that are now occupied vary considerably in style and construction, but all provide their owners with recreational diversions from FOREST CAMP — Above shows part of one of two new camp sites in the Rogue River National forest recently completed by forest service personnel.

Two Camps Open In Dead Indian Area of Forest

Ashland — Two new forest service camps have been opened in the Dead Indian area about 27 miles from Ashland, according to Ashland District Ranger Harold (Red) Thomas.

Thomas said both camps were completed earlier this month and predicted they will get plenty of use when deer hunting season opens next month.

Beaver Dam Creek camp is located about 25 miles up Dead Indian road and another 1 1/2 miles north of the Fish Lake turn. Daley camp is situated about one-fourth mile north of the first camp.

Facilities at Camps
Each camp has five tables, five stoves and five parking spots, but Daley is considerably larger in area, Thomas said.

Crews worked during August, Thomas explained, to develop a spring above the first camp and then laid 2,400 feet of plastic pipeline to provide drinking water at both camps. The spring itself is three feet deep and two feet in diameter.

Signs have been placed at each campsite, and Thomas said numerous campers have used the facilities since they were completed just before the Labor Day week end.

Headquarters for Demo Group Opens

Henry Padgham, general chairman of the Jackson County Citizens for Kennedy-Johnson committee, with headquarters at 122 East Eighth st., Medford, has announced the appointment of Mrs. Inez Friel as headquarters chairman.

Volunteer support has already begun, he said, and Mrs. Friel and her assistants are scheduling workers for duty both at the headquarters and for outside activity.

A Veterans-for-Kennedy committee organized earlier and a Republicans-for-Kennedy movement have also appeared to offer supplementary help under the "Citizens for Kennedy" leadership, he said.

While the headquarters is already open, a formal opening will be held when Congresswoman Edith Green of Portland, State Chairman for Kennedy-Johnson, visits Medford, Padgham said. At that time the Citizens for Kennedy-Johnson, Jackson County Democratic Central committee and the Eleanor Roosevelt League will combine in holding a tea for Mrs. Green.

Rogue River May Get City Park

Rogue River — The Oregon state highway commission is expected to consider a river frontage park for Rogue River during its Sept. 28 meeting in Portland, according to John Leyen, Rogue River mayor.

Three state highway department engineers who inspected the proposed park site between the Rogue River bridge and Wards creek will recommend it, Leyen said.

The city council previously had approved the park site. The state highway department would give the city the walk-in park on the river, according to the suggestion.

"At first, the engineers wouldn't allow it since they said we didn't have any access to the park," the mayor explained. "But now we have two sidewalks on either side of the overpass which extends Depoe st. over the railroad tracks. Besides that we have just completed a pipeline from the river to the city near the park site and we would naturally have access to that."

The state highway department has approved the gift as recommended providing the city relieves the state of any responsibility for any accidents, fences the plot and maintains it as a park. Leyen said money for benches and picnic tables would come from the city's park fund.
