Nikita's Week End Hideaway Has 'Capitalist' Luxuries

By ALINE MOSBY
United Press International
Glenn Cove, N. Y. — Nikita Khrushchev's weekend hideaway is an unpretentious mansion featuring such capitalist luxuries as two pools and a croquet court.

The Russians bought the three-story, English Tudor-style home in keeping with the Moscow custom of having a "dacha," or country place.

No Moscow dacha looks like it. The Communist chief will rest in an area filled with so many millionaires that, as one resident tells me, they seldom use the numerous country clubs around.

They have their own tennis courts and private beaches on their estates on Long Island Sound.

Neighbors Remember
Guards keep out all but Soviet U.N. personnel from their "dacha." But folks on neighboring estates remember the place, particularly hospital president Sherman Pratt, whose father built it in 1912 of gray stone hauled in on barges.

After the iron front gate you drive nearly a mile along a landscaped drive before you even get to the country manor. On the ground floor are the kitchen and servants quarters, larger than most Soviet delegates' apartments in Moscow. Up the stairs, recalled Pratt, are the living room, dining room, breakfast room and two libraries. On the third floor are 12 master bedroom suites. The rooms have paneled walls and murals.

Outside, the 30-acre estate is resplendent with a swimming pool, croquet court, glassed-in sun porch, tea house and outdoor tennis court. Statuary graces the formal garden. One part is sunk into the ground, steps leading to a fish pond. Outside the area the Soviets bought is an indoor tennis court, now the Glenn Cove YMCA.

"Personally, I'd never have thought of the house for myself, it's much too big," said Pratt. "Not many homes like this left. The upkeep is too high and to build it today might cost $1,500,000." Sold in 1938
Pratt said his stepmother sold the mansion in 1938 to a manufacturing company. The indoor tennis court became an office building. The Russians bought the gray stone "white elephant" shortly after the war and put up a fence around the 30 acres.

Khrushchev will sleep in a house whose builders are related to none other than Secretary of State Christian Herter. One of Pratt's uncles, Fred, is Herter's father-in-law.

The townfolk here have varying views about the house. One wealthy matron said it was "just like a castle, magnificent." But a local journalist sniffed, "just junk that rich Americans built when they didn't know any better."

Market Loses $7.6 Billion; Damage Done in One Session

New York — UPI — The stock market lost $7.6 billion in market values last week and the damage was done in one session — Monday. Traders, beset all this month with declining stock prices, grew more nervous last week, and over the continued cloudy outlook for business and the arrival of Khrushchev and Co. This brought much caution into Monday's opening and prices dipped from the start. When they fell through the 1960 resistance point, which had held three previous times this year, a selling wave was touched off and prices at the close were down as much as 21 points.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average was down 15.42 points on the day, the sharpest break since it fell 31.89 points nearly five years ago following President Eisenhower's heart attack. A slight technical recovery was made in the next two sessions. But with no new market stimulants coming into the picture prices backed down again on Thursday and Friday.

Taking the economic and international outlook into market context, market analysts say there is not much to brighten prospects for an early development of a major uptrend or a sustained buying interest. A worsening of the situation is feasible, they add, should investors become more disappointed with the state of affairs. One expert also believes that the 600 level in the Dow Jones industrial average, which halted selling drives in March, May and July before

Oregon Guard Praised At State Conference

Col. Waldo E. Timm, Portland and a member of the Air National Guard, was elected president of the Oregon National Guard association at an association conference in Medford last night. Some 300 officers attended the conference and heard Maj. Gen. Chester E. McCarty, commander of the Third Air Force Reserve Region, Robins Air Force Base, Georgia, say that "we must fight tomorrow's wars with the personnel and equipment and state of training of today."

General McCarty praised the Oregon National Guard for emphasis on training of the individual soldier, trained manpower, and the deterrent effect of coordination among Army, Air and Naval forces. He also stressed the importance of reserve forces. Other officers elected to association officers besides to as Colonel Timm were Col. Paul L. Kliever, Salem and Army National Guard first vice president; and Lt. Col. Robert D. Richards, Portland and Air National Guard, second vice president.

Elected to the board of trustees were Col. William B. Foster, McMinnville, Lt. Col. John G. Nelson, Portland, and Lt. Col. Harold W. Heiser, Salem. The conference also heard an address by Sprague H. Carter, state director, selective service system of Oregon. Carter told the Guardsmen that some 6,000 registrants are currently classified as serving their military obligation through the Oregon National Guard. Carter said 1,000 18-year-olds are being registered each month. Maj. Gen. Gilman C. Mudgett, deputy commanding general of the Sixth Army, San Francisco, discussed the technical revolutions which have produced an offering of fantastic weapons of war, yet emphasized the importance of the foot soldier and his role in safeguarding the peace. The annual convention also heard remarks by Col. Donovan F. Smith, director 25th NORAD operations and training, and Col. Donald Washington, senior Army advisor, Oregon National Guard. Colonel Washington told the group that summer field training of the Oregon units, at Camp Rilea, Warrenton and Ft. Lewis, Wash., was outstanding. He said the state can be proud of the accomplishments of the Oregon National Guard. Warne Nunn, executive assistant to Gov. Mark O. Hatfield, spoke on behalf of the governor at the conference. He encouraged the Guardsmen to keep abreast of current situations, and extended Governor Hatfield's feeling of

UMC Film Proves Popular; Requests For Use Are Many

The United Medford Crusade film which was recently completed by UMC volunteers has proven popular, according to Publicity Chairman Richard Courtright. Requests for showings have come from as far away as Roseburg. One local business man said that it would make a good chamber of commerce film, Courtright said.

Most of the scenes are of the Medford area. Those showing child care agencies in Portland were taken earlier this year when a group of local citizens toured the agencies. All photography was done by Richard Simonson, Richard Carter and James Lattie. The film using the facilities of KBES-TV. The script was written by Court-right, Genevieve Gardner and Bill Abbott.

Narrates Film
ABC Newscaster Frank Hemingway of Los Angeles volunteered to do the narration. He visited Medford Sept. 10 and recorded the narration at KMED at that time.

Ellis Finstein added the musical background to the recorded narration and synchronized the recording to the film. "After viewing the film, a person can't help but realize the importance of the 28 UMC agencies to our community," Courtright said.

A date for showing the UMC movie may be made by telephoning Ken Brown at SPring 2-6025. The film is 15 minutes long.

The first report luncheon of the 1960 United Medford Crusade campaign will be held Monday noon at the Red Cross building on Hawthorne st. The luncheon is being furnished by the Medford Rotary club and is open to all campaign volunteers, according to UMC Arrangements Chairman Murray Gardiner. Dr. Justin Dyrud has prepared special entertainment.

Lumumba's Aide Placed in Jail

Leopoldville, The Congo — UPI — Deposed Premier Patrice Lumumba's former right-hand man has been arrested on charges plotting the attempted assassination of Congolese strongman Col. Joseph Mobutu, army sources said today. Former Vice Premier Antoine Gizenga, 41, a pro-Communist, was jailed along with Maurice Mpolo, former minister for youth and sports in the Lumumba government, the sources said. Gizenga's nationalist opponents claimed he was behind efforts to establish strong Communist ties in the Congo.

BURIED TOGETHER

Burnet, Tex. — UPI — Mr. and Mrs. Jim Guthrie, whom neighbors said were more in love than when they were married 50 years ago, were buried side by side Friday. Guthrie, 79, a retired druggist, died Thursday. His wife, 81, wasn't told. But a few hours later she joined her husband in death.

LIVING COSTS STABILIZE

Washington — UPI — Price cuts on food, home appliances and new cars held the cost of living steady in August, halting a six-month climb. The price index remained at 126.8 per cent of 1947-49 costs.

Ted Kennedy To Visit Oregon

Portland — UPI — Ted Kennedy, youngest brother of Sen. John Kennedy, (D-Mass.), Democratic presidential candidate, will arrive in Portland Sunday to begin a two-day campaign for his brother. The younger Kennedy, western director of his brother's campaign, will start the day's activities at a reception opening the Kennedy-Johnson headquarters in Oregon City. At 4 p.m., Ted will attend the opening ceremonies of the Salem campaign headquarters and return to Portland to speak at 8 p.m. at the State Kennedy-Johnson headquarters. He will visit Roseburg Monday with a luncheon meeting, then go to Medford for the opening of that city's campaign center and a dinner at 5 p.m. He is scheduled for a meeting in Klamath Falls at 8:30 p.m. Demand for trained engineers will go up steadily, it is predicted. By 1968 15 graduates will be recruited for every 10 hired last year.

Maurine Asks New Medical Bill

Eugene — UPI — Mrs. Maurine Neuberger said Saturday new legislation to place medical aid for elderly citizens under Social Security should be "the first order of business" when Congress reconvenes in January. In remarks prepared for delivery at a dinner meeting of Eugene Business and Professional women, the Democratic senatorial candidate said the need for action was urgent because of the "confusion and inadequacy" of the medicare bill recently signed into law. She cited a statement by New York's Republican governor, Nelson Rockefeller, that he did not regard the present law as any "real solution" to the problem of providing medical care for the aged.
