Bonn Defended Against Charges Of Plotting War

Macmillan touched off another Khrushchev tantrum when he deplored the Soviet Union's "reactionary and backward-looking" policies on Germany and defended the Bonn government against Red charges it was plotting a war of revenge against Russia. Khrushchev beat his desk with both hands, grinning as if he enjoyed the outbreak. Macmillan then proposed that the whole subject of disarmament be taken up by a committee of technical and nonpolitical experts who could decide in advance what needed to be done before the world politicians tried to reach agreement. Macmillan said the Soviets apparently felt that any system of inspection and control of disarmament was in reality some sort of a great spy plot. Khrushchev again began shouting from the rear of the hall.

Yells at Speaker

The Russian rose to his feet, his voice clashing with Macmillan's while he pointed his finger at the speaker. Then Khrushchev yelled in Russian: "Accept disarmament and we will accept any controls." Assembly President Frederick H. Boland of Ireland rapped for order and Khrushchev subsided. Macmillan demanded icily that he be given a translation of Khrushchev's remarks. The assembly burst into laughter. When Macmillan finished speaking with an appeal for end of the deep division in the world today, the assembly sat in silence for a moment. Then a wave of applause swept over the delegates while Khrushchev, the other Communists and the delegation from Guinea sat stiffly in their seats.

Khrushchev scowled and twiddled his fingers as Macmillan walked down the aisle and took his seat. Italian Foreign Minister Antonio Segni rose and shook Macmillan's hand warmly. Khrushchev wandered out into the hall.

Receives More Applause

Macmillan received longer applause than either President Eisenhower or Khrushchev in his speeches last week. Delegates stood and clapped as he made the long trip from the podium to his seat near the rear of the hall. Afterward, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko said he saw "nothing useful" in the Macmillan speech. When asked about Macmillan's disarmament proposals he snorted: "Controls! Controls! The League of Nations talked about that for 15 years without any positive result." Macmillan will follow up his U.N. speech with a private summit meeting with Khrushchev later in the day, bringing East-West issues to the level of the personal diplomacy both advocate. The Soviets sought to change the subjects before the U.N. General Assembly by trying to force an immediate assembly debate on disarmament which would have given Khrushchev a chance to seize the initiative seized by the West in a series of defeats of earlier Russian proposals. But the 21-member Steering committee which approves assembly agenda items voted overwhelmingly against the Russian demand in a meeting that lasted until after midnight.

East Germans Said Fleeing to West

Berlin (UPI)—East Germans are fleeing to the West in record numbers because they fear a new Communist blockade may cut their escape routes, it was reported today. Heinz Lonchant, director of West Berlin's Marienfelde refugee center, said new Communist pressures are forcing thousands of East Germans to cross the border. The East German Communists began putting the squeeze on West Berlin shortly before Soviet Premier Khrushchev departed for the United Nations General Assembly sessions in New York. The Soviets have given the Communist East German regime control over all West Germans traveling to and within the city. But the Russians retained their control over the Western Allies in Berlin.

Two Bombs Explode During Big Castro Rally in Havana

Havana (UPI)—Two bomb explosions at a giant welcome home rally Wednesday night brought a storm of fury against the United States from Premier Fidel Castro and an announcement he was setting up a neighborhood spy system to "catch lackeys of imperialism." The noisy blasts interrupted Castro's speech but did no damage. A panic was averted when Castro had his lieutenants lead the 150,000 massed Cubans in the national anthem. Five persons, including a man wearing the garb of a priest, were reported arrested. The bearded premier scoffed at the bombs, blamed them on the United States and said he was setting up big-brother vigilance committees in every block of Havana to root out what he called "lackeys of imperialism and tyranny." He said civilian militia units would be enlarged throughout Cuba "zone by zone." The bombs exploded in Zayas Park, across the street from the palace where Castro, flanked by Soviet Ambassador Sergei Kudriatsev and other honored guests, spoke. Also on the stand were the Russian crewmen of the Soviet turbo-jet which flew Castro back to Havana from the United Nations General Assembly. Castro's Cubana Airlines plane was impounded in New York by a court order. The blasts resounded throughout the nation over radio and television networks carrying Castro's speech. The bombs apparently were of the type known as "petardos"—small but noisy.

Following the first explosion, Castro told the crowd: "Everybody knows who paid for that bomb—those are the bombs of imperialism." "I believe tomorrow they will go to charge your excellency," he said, in what was interpreted as a reference to U.S. Ambassador Philip Bonsal.

"Mark this well," he added, "the moment I was talking of imperialism, the bomb exploded." The crowd responded with a thunderous chant of "To the wall, to the wall"—death by firing squad.

Castro said the bombings would only spur his revolutionary program and promised that each bomb the "imperialists" paid for would mean the nationalization of another American-owned property. The crowds carried anti-American and pro-Russian signs and chanted such slogans as "Viva Castro," "Viva Khrushchev," "Viva Lumumba," and the familiar "Cuba yes, Yankees no."

Eisenhower To Plug for Nixon at Chicago

United Press International President Eisenhower, retiring as undefeated champ, climbed back into the political ring today to help one of the contenders battling for his crown. Eisenhower will speak in support of GOP presidential candidate Richard M. Nixon at a $100-a-plate Republican fund raising banquet in Chicago tonight. The President's speech will be piped to 35 similar dinners across the country by closed-circuit television.

Nixon also will address the affairs by television from Boston, the home town of his Democratic rival, Sen. John F. Kennedy. Before the banquet, the vice president scheduled campaign appearances in Burlington, Vt., and Manchester, N.H.—normally Republican territory.

Plans Dozen Talks

Kennedy's stumping timetable took him across New York's Mohawk Valley by motorcade from Albany to Syracuse. He planned at least a dozen speeches, expected to continue his new hard-hitting attack on Nixon.

Kennedy dropped his previous relatively mild references to Nixon and struck hard at his opponent Wednesday night in a speech to a frenzied crowd of 20,000 in Buffalo, N.Y.—his largest indoor audience of the campaign. The Democratic nominee scored Nixon for promising to help economically depressed areas after Eisenhower had vetoed two bills to aid such areas. He said Nixon followed the 1936 philosophy of Alfred Landon on medical care for the aged.

In a day-long swing through traditionally Republican upstate New York, Kennedy repeatedly charged that the economic and social welfare policies of the GOP had not changed since the days of Presidents Warren G. Harding and Calvin Coolidge.

Nixon also campaigned Wednesday in New York—on Long Island—in his fight for the Empire State's valuable 45 electoral votes. He drew large and enthusiastic crowds in the heavily Republican section with a defense of the administration's stand on Communism.

Campaign Quotes

By United Press International
Sen. John F. Kennedy:
(At Buffalo, N.Y.): "This year again only a single Republican in the Senate voted for medical care for the aged. This year again Mr. Nixon, as the spokesman for his party, speaking to 73 million people on our television debate, said that our efforts to provide medical care through Social Security were 'extreme.' "But I don't believe it is 'extreme' to help our older citizens get the medical attention they need. I don't believe it is 'extreme' to work through our tried and tested Social Security system. I don't believe it is 'extreme' to relieve poverty and illness and despair." "What is 'extreme' is the fact of millions of older Americans who are unable to afford the medical care—the doctors and drugs and hospital rooms—which they so desperately need. And what is 'extreme' is the opposition of the Republican party to every effort to bring help to our older citizens."

(At Erie, Pa.) He promised "full steam forward" in completing the local Erie port development project as a link to the St. Lawrence Seaway. (At Lockport, N.Y.) "The issue in this campaign is not the bogus issue of how far we extend the powers of the federal government tomorrow. It is the real issue of how well we use the powers of the federal government today."

Vice President Richard M. Nixon:
(At Commack in suburban New York) Called Kennedy's new frontier a "retread—pale carbon copies of what America left in 1953."

He promised that U.S. military strength "will be maintained, at whatever cost, at a level which will turn an enemy attack."
(Still on Long Island in suburban New York in Hicksville and Mineola) He called for "keeping the peace without surrender."

And in a slap at Kennedy—"People are making a mistake in blaming our country and our President for what the Communists are doing. We are not going to change our policies to what the Communists would like because if we do that means surrender."

(At New York in outlining a seven-point program for urban housing and construction) He pointed out four-fifths of the nation's "dramatic post-war population increase has been concentrated in the suburbs."

(At New York on the Lodge-Nixon ticket): "If we are elected, you'll have men who never will be satisfied with being second best in anything—you will have men who will be firm with the Communists but never heating up the atmosphere because of some personal insults."

LOOK WHAT DODGE HAS DONE FOR COMPACTS

The name, Lancer: one hardtop; one 2-door sedan; two 4-door sedans; two wagons. What kind of cars are they? This kind: two feet shorter; many pounds leaner; a couple of hundred dollars less in cost than usual automobiles. Lancer welcomes a family of six lavishly. Has plenty of trunk. Its fully-unitized body is very quiet, very tough. Lancer is also mannerly. It corners decisively, takes a well scarred road with aplomb. Parks obediently. More reasons to buy? Read on. The interiors are rich, but simple. Shed soil, wear well, feel good. The engine is highly spirited, but extremely light on regular gasoline. One more thing, Lancer is built by Dodge. Our name is on it. This means Lancer will stay nice and shiny. How so? The body is rustproofed by an exclusive Chrysler Corporation process. Enough talk. Meet Lancer at your Dodge Dealer. Now.
