

Crater Light Bulb Sale Is Planned

The annual Crater Lions club light bulb sale will be held Monday and Tuesday nights next week, the club has announced.

Proceeds from the sale will be used locally to aid the blind or persons with sight problems who cannot finance proper care or equipment, the club said.

Members of the club will make a house-to-house tour between 6:30 and 9:30 p.m. each day. A sack of eight light bulbs costs $2. The bulbs are of various sizes, the club noted.

Medford residents have been urged to turn on porch lights both nights.

Fisheries Management Observed on Field Trip

More than 25 members of the U.S. forest service and the Oregon state game commission recently attended a field trip to observe fisheries management practices on the Rogue river.

The cooperative trips are held annually to acquaint members of one agency with the work being done by the other in the field of wildlife management. Close working relations must be maintained since it is the responsibility of the forest service to administer wildlife habitat as a function of multiple-use management, and the state game commission to manage the fish and game resource.

The trip started at the Central Point screen shop where the fabrication of fish screens is done. The group observed the use of several types of fish screens on the Rogue river at the Savage Rapids dam, Gold Ray dam, and the Gold Hill Irrigation ditch.

Open Discussion
Lunch was eaten at TouVelle State park where an open discussion of fisheries and fish habitat management was held.

After viewing the Shady Cove public launching ramp, the group moved on to the Rogue Elk spawning ground where they observed chinook salmon spawning, and had a discussion on the biology, life cycle, and habitat requirements of migratory fish.

The trip ended at the McLeod egg-taking station where hatchery personnel were observed trapping chinook salmon and stripping and fertilizing the eggs.

Gregory Discusses Labor Legislation

John L. Gregory, candidate for state representative from Jackson county, said at a meeting of the electrical workers union here this week that "labor must be on guard against its enemies by supporting the legislative candidates who believe in the labor movement."

Gregory added that there had been little labor legislation in Oregon, and that most of the legislation was anti-labor in nature.

There may be more attempts to pass restrictive legislation, Gregory said, because of the success of the Landrum-Griffin bill in Congress last year which will be considered by some members to be indication of public opinion.

Gregory also said that there was a need for study of legislation requiring compulsory arbitration to settle labor disputes after a strike has extended over an unreasonable period of time.
