

Campaign Quotes

By United Press International
Sen. John F. Kennedy (to Louisville, Ky., fund-raising dinner):

"My opponent, of course, is reluctant to admit around election time that he is a Republican . . ."

"He says he is against the Republican secretary of agriculture. He says he is against the Republican secretary of treasury's tight money policies. He says he is against the Republican secretary of interior's principle of 'no new starts' on water projects . . ."

"The next thing you know, the Republican truth squad will have to follow him . . ."

"He says he is for higher teachers' salaries, forgetting that it was his vote that killed an amendment offering funds to the states to raise such salaries . . ."

"He says he is for federal aid to colleges, forgetting that he called it undesirable in the days when the Democratic Congress passed it twice and the Republican administration vetoed it twice . . ."

"It is a little late for Mr. Nixon to be putting out a 'position paper' on education, because it cannot paper over his record or the record of the Republican party . . ."

(In a statement issued at Louisville):

"By revising downward the administration's estimate of revenues, the mid-year budget report has officially admitted the current state of stagnation in our economy. The time has come to select an administration committed to a policy of full employment . . ."

"Action must be taken to wipe out the soft spots in our economy before their blight spreads throughout the nation . . ."

Vice President Richard M. Nixon (in text of speech to Philadelphia rally):

"Nowhere in the South has Kennedy squarely faced up to this civil rights issue since his nomination . . ."

"My position, and that of my running mate, Henry Cabot Lodge, has been clear and straight-forward. We have said the same thing in every section of the country. We call on our opponents to do likewise . . ."

"In each place (visited in the South), I have stated my views on civil rights . . ."

"I am informed that in, but one of 10 southern speeches, and then only fleetingly, has Kennedy presented his views or the platform commitments his party made on the issue of civil rights . . ."

"I cannot believe that Kennedy thinks the elimination of discrimination is a problem confined to the North . . ."

"Democratic vice presidential nominee Lyndon B. Johnson has barely spoken at all on the issue of civil rights . . ."

"It is up to those pledged to the platform of that (Democratic) party to explain, in a Congress controlled by them two to one, their failure to enact these (civil rights) items . . ."

(To Columbia Republican League in New York City):

"Nothing can obscure the fact that under Dwight Eisenhower we ended one war . . . and have peace without surrender today . . ."

"President Eisenhower is not making a fool of himself in the United Nations . . . not trying to muscle in on The Congo . . . and not offering phony disarmament proposals . . ."
